HAVE YOU SEEN DAVID JONES' WINDOWS?

A NEW AND NOVEL METHOD OF SHOWING

SUMMER FABRICS.

Instead of just displaying the various examples of Summer Dress Materials in the roll or hung over a stand, as is generally the case, a unique method of draping has been effectively used, which gives many ideas in newest styles and authentic modes for fashionable frocking.

The ingenuity of the window dresser in introducing other novel features has combined to make an exhibition which should be seen by all interested in fashion and fabrics.

After viewing the windows you are invited to examine [illegible] in first floor departments without [illegible] tion to purchase.

Light as a piece of thistledown, she skims with bird-like effortlessness through the air; suspended by one foot she swings and twists and turns till the eyes grow dizzy; she flies from one ring to another with marvellous exactitude; leans out at impossible angles with only the suspicion of security, and poises in mid-air like a butterfly in flight. LAW REPORT.

BANCO COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice and a jury of four.)

MOTOR CYCLE COLLISION.

Sefton v Smith.

Mr. Maxwell, instructed by Mr. R. A. Monro King, appeared for the plaintiff. Defendant appeared in person. This was an action brought by Robert Sefton, at present a sapper in the A.I.F., against J. Pender Smith, motor mechanic, to recover compensation for damages to a motor cycle and sidecar. The plaintiff's case was that, before the accident he was manager for Messrs. Stott and Hoare at Newcastle, and defendant was a resident of Lithgow. On March 24 last he was driving his motor cycle from Strathfield to Katoomba with a lady in the side-car. He was approaching the summit of Linden hill, which at one place had what is known as a "hair-pin" turn, and was driving the cycle slowly on his right side when he saw defendant, who was also driving a motor-cycle with side-car attached, coming down the hill at a pace which he estimated at from 30 to 35 miles an hour, on his wrong side of the road. Plaintiff shouted a warning to him, and turned sharp to his left and away from the road. It was, however, too late, and defendant struck the plaintiff's side-car near the mudguard, and severely damaged both it and the motor-cycle. Neither plaintiff nor the lady passenger was injured, but defendant's vehicle turned over, and he was pinned beneath the side-car without, however, sustaining much personal injury. It was explained that while the plaintiff's side-car was attached to the right hand side of his motor-cycle, defendant's was fastened to the left of his motor-cycle. Plaintiff stated further that after the accident defendant admitted that he was in fault, and promised to pay for the damage. Plaintiff estimated the cost of repair to the motor-cycle and car and other expenses at £50.

Defendant pleaded not guilty, and gave evidence for the purpose of showing that he was not driving fast, as stated, and that the collision was due to the negligence of plaintiff. He also denied that he admitted he was in fault, or that he offered to pay for the damage done.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, with damages, £35.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Street.)

MARKS v MARKS.

Mr. Nicholas, instructed by Messrs. Wilkinson and Osborne, appeared for the petitioner. Respondent did not appear. This was a suit brought by Dorothea Mary Marks (formerly Osborne, nee Mair), against Theodore John Marks, of Woollahra, architect, for the restitution of conjugal rights. The parties were married in January, 1913, at Duke-street, London, according to the rites of the Church of England, and subsequently they returned to Australia. They lived together until February last, and since then the respondent had, according to petitioner's testimony, refused to provide her with a home, although repeatedly requested to do so. She had been in bad health, and there had been a misunderstanding between them, but she had never been guilty of any misconduct which justified her husband in refusing to live with her. His Honor granted a decree directing respondent to return to petitioner within 21 days after service of notice of decree. His Honor also said he had received an anonymous letter in connection with the suit. He, of course, could take no notice of communications, anonymous or otherwise, in regard to suits pending; and if people had information which they thought ought to be brought to the knowledge of the Court, the proper step was to communicate with the Crown Solicitor. Anonymous letters to the Judge could serve no useful purpose.

LEE v LEE.

Mr. Milner Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., appeared for Astella Lee (formerly Hale), who asked for a decree against her husband, Raymond Lee, grazier, of Gladstone, on the ground of desertion. Respondent did not appear. The parties were married on January 21, 1911, at St. Andrew's Cathedral, and respondent left petitioner in 1913. Though subsequently requested to do so, respondent had refused to return to petitioner. His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

GRAY v GRAY.

Mr. Boyce, instructed by Messrs. A. J. Taylor and Greenwell, appeared for petitioner, Clement Gray, chemist, who sued for dissolution of his marriage with Adelaide Blanche Gray (formerly Fletcher), on the ground of desertion by reason of respondent failing to comply with a decree made by the Court for the restitution of conjugal rights. Mr. Hammond, instructed by Messrs. Robson and Cowlishaw, appeared for the respondent, but only on the question of the custody of the two daughters, the issue of the marriage. It, however, transpired in the course of the hearing that petitioner had no objection to respondent retaining the custody of the children. The parties were married in August, 1909, at St. Matthew's Church, Manly, according to the rites of the Church of England. His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

FLOOD v FLOOD.

Mr. H. Everingham appeared for petitioner, William John Henry Flood, who sued for the dissolution of his marriage with Agnes Theresa Ramburg Flood (formerly Hudson), on the ground of respondent's misconduct with William Milligan, who was joined as co-respondent. Respondent and co-respondent did not appear. The marriage of petitioner and respondent took place in December, 1907, at the Registrar-General's, Perth (W.A.). His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months, with costs against co-respondent.

INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Judge Rolin.)

SUGAR COMPANY'S APPEAL.

Argument was continued in the appeal by the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, Ltd., against the award of the Manufacturing, No. 2, Group, No. 9 Board. The appeal is part heard.

(Before Judge Curlewis.)

APPEAL FROM JUDGE TO JUDGE.

Last Friday Mr. Justice Heydon mentioned an application by the Stove and Piano Frame-moulders and Stovemakers' Employees' Union, for consent to appeal against a recent award given by Judge Rolin. In referring the matter to another Judge Mr. Justice Heydon said: "Awards should only be reopened when the reopening involves the immediate reconsideration of the Judge in very special cases. This case will go into Judge Curlewis's Court on Monday, when the applicants will have to show special reasons why an appeal should be heard."

Consequently, the case came before Judge Curlewis yesterday. Mr. M. Henwood appeared for the applicant union; and Mr. Vero Read (Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Co.), to oppose on behalf of Metters, Ltd., James Ward, Ltd., and other employers. The main grounds for the appeal were that the Court was wrong in applying the principles of the judgment of November 29, 1916, and that evidence was given which showed that the financial position of the industry was much stronger than when the Court held the previous inquiry. It was further contended that the Court, sitting as a Board, was wrong in the classifications of certain employees. Amendment, or variation, of the award was, therefore, applied for.

Mr. Vero Read urged that the Court had no jurisdiction in the matter. Argument followed on this point. His Honor then said that he would reserve his decision on the question of jurisdiction before proceeding with evidence on the facts.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Docker.)

STRONG-ROOM DOOR.

Peter Mathieson, merchant of Sydney, sued A. D. Couling of Belmore, demolition contractor and carrier, for £20 for non-delivery of a Milner strong-room door, which he alleged he had failed to convey as agreed. An alternative claim was for £21 for depriving plaintiff of the use of the said door. The defendant denied that he promised to carry the door as alleged, and stated that the plaintiff never delivered it to defendant. The latter, as a set-off, cross-claimed £7 10s for removal for plaintiff of three iron safes.

Mr. W. J. Curtis, instructed by Mr. G. Croaker, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. W. W. Perry, instructed by Messrs. T. Rose and Dawes, for the defendant. His Honor returned a verdict for the plaintiff for £21, to be reduced to 1s on return of the door by the defendant.

ALLEGED TRESPASS.

Augustus Claude Laurie Melvin Goodman, of Milson's Point Arcade, florist, claimed £130 from James Cecil Coldham Fussell, of Falcon and Merlin streets, North Sydney. The plaintiff alleged that his premises in Falcon-street were broken and enforced by the defendant and certain goods carried away. The defence was justification, the plaintiff, as tenant of defendant, having agreed that the term of occupancy should be surrendered, and the defendant having entered upon a relet, pursuant to such surrender. Mr. W. W. Perry, instructed by Messrs. Sheehy and Murray, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. D. S. Edwards, instructed by Mr. G. A. Raves, for the defendant.

At the conclusion of the evidence the plaintiff accepted a non-suit.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Backhouse.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

Leslie Albert Thomas Quigley was found not guilty on a charge of wantonly driving a motor-car and inflicting grievous bodily harm. Mr. L. J. McKean, instructed by Mr. H. C. Eddie, appeared for the defence.

Matthew Thomas Cole was acquitted of a charge of larceny, and was thereupon discharged. Mr. K. Cowan, instructed by Messrs. F. C. Petrie and Son, represented the accused.

Eugene Owens, for whom Mr. Blackburn appeared, was found not guilty on a charge of larceny, and discharged.

George William Summers and Eric George Mather, who pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering; and Arnold Henry Travers, who pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing, were bound over to appear before the Court for sentence on Friday.

MUNICIPAL APPEAL.

Before Judge Scholes.

LITHGOW EXTENSION, LTD., v LITHGOW COUNCIL.

The Council of the Lithgow Municipality disapproved of certain plans and specifications submitted by the Lithgow Extension Company, Ltd., of 82 Pitt-street, Sydney, in connection with the subdivision of the Coerwull Estate, Lithgow. The Company now appealed against the council's decision on the grounds, mainly, that it was not justified, as the said plans and specifications were fair and reasonable, and had proper regard to the public interest. Mr. G. E. Flannery, instructed by Mr. R. J. Jacobs, appeared for the appellant; and Mr. W. W. Monahan, instructed by Messrs. Thompson and Le Fevre, of Lithgow, for the respondent council.

When evidence was concluded, his Honor stated that he would view the property in question next Saturday, before giving his decision.

LONESOME HEIGHTS.

BY HALLIWELL SUTCLIFFE.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

CHAPTER XVI.—Continued.

Then the old, rebellious mood came to her, because she was lonely since Dick's going. Squires and their ladies, after all, could look after their own troubles, she told herself; they rode high and sure above such common happenings as came to the rougher sort. Yet, for all that, she had no good dreams that night. Constantly she seemed to be unravelling a web of her own weaving, with knots that hindered her at every turn, and, whenever she was in a fair way to untie the knots Silas came, with his unlovely, gossip's face, and tied them all the faster.

The Squire rode home, meanwhile, with happy unconcern. Dick had fallen into no great disaster, after all, and would come out of the trouble, doubtless, with his accustomed luck.

Mrs. Holt heard the sound of hoofs up the road, and was ready with her welcome at the porch. "How did it speed, laddie?" she asked.

"Very well, mother."

"The bairns—have you stifled their crying?"

"Mr. Oastler tells me I have helped."

She drew his face down, with a lack of reticence that allowed a tear or two to fall as she kissed him. "We've thought of nothing else, Hazel and I, since you rode for London, you two. We had shut our ears to the children's trouble, because our men-folk did. Yet it was there always, Jasper—the weary feet on the road—the sobbing that would not be still—and, my dear, I'm a common-sense woman, as I tell you often, with no time for daylight dreams, but Hazel half persuaded me just now that the Grail was not lost long ago—that it is among us still. You see how fanciful we women get when our men leave us too long alone. It was Hazel's fault, because she spent a whole wet day with some old book of Sir John Mallory's that she found in the library."

Jasper remembered the meeting there in London—the faces turned to him as he rose to speak—the moment's fright and consternation, and afterwards the courage and the fire that seemed lent to him in time of need. He had made no public speech before, save at rustic gatherings, where a little jest brought a friendly roar of laughter. He trusted that no such effort would be asked of him again. It stood apart that hour of quiet triumph, from the life that had been and the life ahead; and he knew now that for a while the torch had been put into his hands, to rear it high in the sight of men, before another sped it forward in his turn.

Mrs. Holt misunderstood his silence. "Oh, it's a pity, boy, that Hazel does not happen to be here to greet you, too. She has been in and out of the house so much lately."

He, in turn, missed her whimsical, half-laughing glance, as he shook himself free of his absorption. "I shall see her to-morrow. Mr. Royd asked me to ride over."

"But to-morrow is a world and a half away. At least, it used to be, when—when your father and I were young. You had no word of Dick on your way home? His bed was not slept in last night, and there was news in the village that the combers had gone over to Mr. Hardcastle's lands. Very proper of them, Jasper." The keen light of feud, tempered by good-humour, glowed in her face. "It is not just the game they bring to larder. They are leal to us, boy—leal to our quarrels—and, for every hare they roast, they count it one on our side of the battle."

"It's odd how we hug our quarrel, mother. I felt as sorry as could be just now, when I came past Roper's farm and Jess told me Hardcastle's louts had beaten us again. Dick, by that token, will be missing for a month or two."

So then he told her of the midnight tumult and the flight, and Dick's reason for his absence. She was quiet for a moment, gathering excuse for her well-beloved and pride in him, as her habit was; and then she smiled, a happy, royal smile.

"Your father would be proud of him, my dear. Dick is a gypsy and a vagabond, but he has the courtier's heart. Punctilio—it's a long, outlandish word, Jasper, and I wish there were a simpler—he has punctilio. In the old days of our house, he would have been pretty with the rapier. And here I stand gossiping, while you must be hungry as a wolf. Your father was always the kindest of men, until hunger got the better of him. I've been trying to teach Hazel that, all the time you were away."

She was fussy, talkative, as she linked her arm in his and they went to the supper ready-laid. For she was planning a surprise for this boy of hers, and her youth returned to her from the havoc of the years.

There were two places laid, and Mrs. Holt rang for the pretty maid, and bade her bring plates and what not for a third.

"We did not know the Squire would be home so soon, Mary—and, to be sure, I'm tired carving joints."

Mary was young to service, and to life. She looked at the Squire, and all her dimples showed. "Pleased to see you, sir. A house is lonesome-like, without a man inside it. So I've always heard, and now we've proved it."

When she had gone, Jasper turned sharply. "I thought it was just you and I, mother. I'm too tired to be civil to a guest."

"Oh, she'll not come in till you've finished. And here's the way, boy. She has gone down to the village on some errand like your own—only it is here, and not in London. You know Nat Shaw's liking for a full quiver? His eighth was born a week ago, and the house more in a muddle than usual, and the man helpless as a sheep."

There came a sudden barking from the stable-yard, and Jasper's spaniel, begging for trifles from the master's hand, joined the chorus in a shrill, eager treble.

"Who is coming, at this time of night?" grumbled the Squire. "We're very well as we are, mother."

"But better by and by, if one of your father's breed ever could find patience."

There was the sound of a door opened and closed lightly, a quick footstep down the passage, and a searching round about the house from one room to another, until the guest found the dining chamber, and stood there in the doorway. The light mists of the April night had spun cobwebs in her hair. There was starshine in her eyes, and all about her the soft air of charity and well-being.

"Oh, I'm late for supper, Mrs. Holt; but Nat grows more helpless, and all the bairns seemed to be crying, all at once. And there was a good deal to be done."

"Go and tidy yourself, child, and take your own good time about it. There's a bear at my supper board, and he rates all women. A bear, child, don't you understand? He'll gobble you up, if you stay, like a nursery-tale come true."

Hazel, glancing round, saw Jasper standing mute, and happy, and straight to the top of his six feet or so of height. And she forgot that she was a grown maid, with need of reticence. She remembered only the far-off day when she was lost in a wood peopled by big dragons—and how he came and slew them—and all the wonderland of these late days, as he rode on his high errand, and she followed gentler tasks. She knew, in this moment of surprise, that her life was his completely, for the marring or the making.

Mrs. Holt broke the silence with her gentle, charitable laugh. "It is good to be young and listen to Jack-o'Dreams. I'll leave you to it, bairns."

When they were alone, Jasper reached out his hands to hers, and gripped them close and warm. "Mr. Oastler's bill goes through next year, they say."

"So soon?" she asked, with quick and fugitive dismay.

"So late?" said Jasper stubbornly. "I've been waiting for you since the world began."

CITY LEASEHOLDS AND FREEHOLDS.

At the instance of the City Council Messrs. Richardson and Wrench, at their rooms yesterday, offered a number of leasehold building blocks at Chippendale and freeholds in Flinders and Bourke streets, adjoining Oxford-street; and also the freehold of a building block in Victoria-street, Darlinghurst. The whole of this land was taken possession of by the City Council in connection with recent city resumptions. Mr. James Gregg occupied the rostrum, and Mr. T. Raine represented Messrs. Raine and Horne, who were joined with Messrs. Richardson and Wrench in the conduct of the sale. There was a good attendance of the public. The Chippendale leasehold blocks did not sell very well. Each block has a frontage of a little over 30 feet. Three of the lots only were disposed of at an annual rental for a term of 50 years of £29 per annum; and two lots realised a rental of £23 per annum. The freehold of three allotments with frontages to Flinders and Bourke streets, near Oxford-street, sold as one block, and realised £3800. This was an irregular-shaped block. There was a good deal of competition for the building block in Victoria-street, close to William-street, Darlinghurst. Finally, it was sold at £44 per foot. The unsold portions in each district will be offered privately.

Mr. Anthony R. Book, Professor of Languages, Malvern (Vic), writes that he would not be without Clements Tonic in the house on any account. He tells his friends to take it.—Advt.

COMPULSORY DIPPING.

The cattle tick is such a serious menace to the future of the dairying and beef cattle industry over a large and undefined portion of this State, and the whole of the Southern States on the mainland, that it is most imperative that nothing should be done likely to hinder the eradication of the tick. Because of that we have been compelled to express regret at the attitude of the Primary Producers' Union. In that connection the general secretary, Mr. A. S. M'Kenzie, again writes:—

In reply to your comment on my letter published in your Thursday's issue, I would point out that at the present time the New South Wales Government have a line of fence running along their border, the object of which is to prevent cattle from migrating into New South Wales, except under supervision. But in spite of the diligence of the Departmental officers in maintaining this fence in repair, there have been instances where the fence has been broken, thus leaving an opening for cattle to wander over the border from the tick infested areas of Queensland. It would therefore be seen that whilst there is a possibility of cattle entering New South Wales without supervision from the tick infested areas of Queensland it would be waste of time and energy to do anything in the direction of totally eradicating the tick. In our opinion we must, as a basis, prevent the possibility of re-introduction of the tick from Queensland, hence our desire to have the buffer area over the border created, from which the Queensland Government should eradicate the tick. I note what you say with regard to the remarks of Mr. Cowley in respect to the dipping facilities being sufficiently adequate for present conditions. This statement is quite at variance with the remarks the Minister for Agriculture made to the deputation which waited on him, when he said that he quite realised that the present dipping facilities were insufficient for the present requirements, and that he would like to be in the position to establish other dips; but the one thing preventing him was the shortage of funds. Members of the P.P.U. are anxious that the tick should be eradicated from our State, but we do say that the success of the whole thing will depend upon the wholehearted co-operation of the Department of Agriculture and the stock-owners, and that the stock-owners must be in the position to realise for themselves that their property will not be unnecessarily damaged.

Cattle in the tick-infested areas in Queensland carry pathogenic ticks, which convey the disease known as redwater. The fact that, with one exception, during the last twenty-five years that dread disease has not obtained a footing in this State proves conclusively that the barrier fence has been effective. Certainly there is always a possibility, however well the fence is maintained, of the disease getting a footing in this State, a development which would be a most ruinous calamity for dairy farmers on the northern rivers. It is for that reason that we have long advocated Federal control in order that the Queensland country, as well as the country in this State, should be cleaned up. The idea of a buffer area on the Queensland side is a splendid one, but would we not have a far greater chance of securing action to that end if we commenced to put our own house in order first? If it is believed that "there is a possibility of cattle entering New South Wales without supervision from the tick-infested areas of Queensland," then it is difficult to understand that the Primary Producers' Union would tolerate shortage of money or any other reason allowing such a perilous position to continue. Stockowners have far more reason to fear the ravages of redwater than any damage to their stock caused by compulsory dipping. If the matter is to resolve into one of waiting until Queensland is prepared to clean up a buffer area, it is well for those likely to be affected to remember that in the meantime it is the stockowners in this State who are taking the risk, not the stockowners in Queensland. We recognise that the executive of the P.P. Union desires to protect its members and is, not unreasonably, afraid of the hardship involved through shortage of dips. In this regard we can only repeat that we have full confidence in the judgment of Mr. P. Cowley, and fear that the union will be unwise if it supports any action making for procrastination.

FRUIT INDUSTRY.

At a meeting of the executive of the Fruitgrowers' Association of N.S.W. on Saturday, a letter was received from the secretary to the Prime Minister, stating that the Prime Minister had decided to permit the importation of 55,000 cases of apples from Canada and the United States of America, to meet requirements during November and December. On the motion of Mr. E. P. Crowther, organising secretary, it was resolved that the State Department of Agriculture be requested to take steps to see that every case of imported American apples is thoroughly inspected, with a view to securing the exclusion of the disease known as American Apple Blotch, at the expense of the importers.

The Comptroller-General of Customs wrote, adverting to the resolution passed by the annual conference of fruitgrowers in favour of the prohibition of animal fertilisers, and stating that the exportation of bone dust was already prohibited by proclamation dated June 23, 1916. It was decided to ask the department to include in the prohibition blood manures.

Mr. Crowther, the organising secretary, reported that he had interviewed the Under-Secretary, Department of Agriculture, and a conference of representative fruitgrowers of the State was to be convened for October 16. The main object was to secure thorough organisation of the industry throughout the State. The Government, he said, had the best interests of the fruitgrowers at heart, but the growers themselves would have to become organised, and appoint an executive body which would be thoroughly representative of the fruitgrowing interests of the whole of the State, and recognised as such by the Government. Mr. Crowther reported having visited many fruitgrowing centres in the State, and found the various fruitgrowing bodies sympathetic with the organising movement. The president congratulated Mr. Crowther on his work.

MR JUSTICE HIGGINS.

At the last monthly meeting of the council of the Royal Agricultural Society, letters were received from several sources, asking the council to take action in respect to Mr. Justice Higgins's award affecting the pastoral and agricultural industries. The council decided that this matter did not come within the province of the society, and therefore no action was taken.

FARMERS AND SETTLERS.

At the last meeting of the executive council of the Farmers and Settlers' Association there were present, Messrs. A. K. Trethowan, M.L.C. (president), J. Fitzpatrick, E. Townsend, W. J. Cartwright, W. E. Wearne, M.L.A., W. W. Killen, A. G. Manning, M.L.A., J. Jelbart, J. F. Hutchinson, A. E. Hunt, M.L.C. (treasurer), and the general secretary, T. I. Campbell. Apologies were received from Messrs. J. M'Lean, L. M'Lachlan, and R. J. M'Donald. Several important matters were dealt with. A telegram was received from the South Australian Farmers and Settlers' Association, referring to the unsatisfactory position in which the farmers' representative on the Central Wheat Board was placed through not being a member of the executive of the board. A letter was received from the Victorian Farmers' Union on the same matter, and urging strong action to ensure that the farmers' representative shall be placed in a position to carry out his duties efficiently and safeguard farmers' interests. It was unanimously agreed:—"That the Central Wheat Board be requested to appoint the farmers' representative, Mr. Clement Giles, to the executive of the board."

A letter from the Yanco Agricultural Society repudiating the statement at the conference by Leeton delegates, "that some settlers at Yanco were practically starving," was considered, and on the motion of Mr. Killen, seconded by Mr. Fitzpatrick, it was resolved that the Yanco Agricultural Society be informed that Mr. Adams' statements had been borne out and justified by information placed before the executive council.

Messrs. Cater, Craig, and Jarrett, of the Leeton irrigation area, waited on the executive and explained certain matters in connection with the report of the Royal Commissioner (Judge Bevan), on which the support and co-operation of the association in representing the claims of the irrigation settlers to the Government was requested. It was agreed that every possible assistance be accorded to the irrigation settlers to secure the compensation awarded by the Royal Commissioner.

It was decided "that the Government be urged to retain the balloting system for conflicting applications for land now in force," and "that the association members in the State Parliament be requested to urge upon the Government to abolish the day labour system as far as possible in Government works and to carry out such work by contract."

A motion by the president, "that the control of the State Wheat Board be placed in the hands of three commissioners, such commissioners to be representative of the producers, the millers, and the shippers, who are to be responsible to the Government, the cost of the administration to be borne by the pool," was seconded by Mr. Manning, and carried unanimously.

ASSISTING AGRICULTURE.

There was a large attendance of members of the council of the Royal Agricultural Society at the monthly meeting. Mr. S. Hordern in the chair. The secretary reported the contract for new works at the showground had been somewhat delayed in consequence of the strike troubles. The south side of the ground, in which the principal improvements are being carried out, will be completely re-made, and would in effect make an extensive addition to the accommodation of the public and exhibitors.

During the month a special committee to consider offering scholarships and prizes for successful agricultural students had met and made representations to the council. These consisted of a scholarship at the Hawkesbury College, which would mean the society keeping one student at the institution for three years, the selected student to win the scholarship as the Royal Agricultural Society's award. Also an exhibition of £100 a year for a selected diploma student from the Hawkesbury College in the B.Sc.A. school. The first boy to be selected is to enter the University in March 1918. A sum of £5 to be devoted as a prize for the best practical student at the Hawkesbury College each year, and also two prizes of £2 2s each to be given for the top student in the first year and the top student in the second year in the agricultural classes at the Technical College. The recommendations were adopted by the council.

On the motion of Sir Joseph Carruthers it was resolved to enlarge the library of the society so as to accommodate the principal agricultural publications of the world; and also the periodical publications of the leading agricultural departments, such as that of the U.S.A. and Canada. These to be kept in the rooms of the society, and a circulating branch to be formed through which the members of the society will be able to obtain by payment of a small fee annually all the principal works contained in the library. The details of the proposition were referred to the library committee for consideration, and steps will be taken immediately to obtain the works necessary to found the new branch.

Mr. J. H. S. Angus was elected a vice-president of the society in place of the late Mr. H. S. Badgery. Mr. A. E. Hunt, M.L.C., a new member of the council, was welcomed by the president.

MEAT EXPORT TRADE.

LONDON, Aug. 9.

It is announced that the Swift Company has signed a definite contract for the purchase of 900,000 square metres of land in Saladillo, and work on the great frigorifico (meat works) to be erected will be begun at once, it being intended to commence operations before the end of the year.

THE BUTTER BUSINESS.

LONDON, Aug. 9.

The London and Provincial Produce Exchanges have drawn up the following list of maximum butter prices for the fortnight ending August 16, 1917, and have received the Food Controller's directions that in no case should they be exceeded in the United Kingdom:—French fresh rolls (ex port), per doz., 24/. Per 112lb: Paris, unsalted, 220/; Danish (ex port), nominal; Dutch (ex port), nominal; Irish creamery or other best (free on rail), 56lb boxes 206/, 28lb boxes and casks 207/, kegs 208/; Australian (ex port), 206/; New Zealand (ex port), 208/; Argentine (ex port), 206/; English, in bulk (ex factory), 208/; Canadian (ex port), 206/; American (ex port), 206/; all unsalted 3/ per cwt. extra. The above represents a strong rise in maximum prices all round. Butter is in short supply, with every prospect of something approaching a butter famine later on. There has been a suspension of shipments from Denmark. It is recognised that supplies from all sources must remain small for some time to come, but it is hoped some relief will come in the shape of greater quantities and better qualities from Australasia. Pressure is being brought on the Government to provide freight for some of the butter known to be stored in New Zealand. The restricted supply of all kinds of Australasian finds a ready sale at full rates.

AMUSEMENTS.

MISS LOTTIE DEARN'S RECITAL.

After an interval of nearly a year, Miss Lottie Dearn, one of the pianists on the staff of the Conservatorium, gave a recital at the hall of the State institution last evening. The young artist was unfortunate in the weather, the downpour of rain being so persistently heavy that but few of her many friends and admirers dared face it. The classic programme was faithfully carried out, however, and the most cordial applause recognised the ability of the player. Miss Dearn opened with Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in B flat," the former less elaborated than some others of the series, but quite in the master's manner as an exemplification of freedom and grace, with a tuneful fugue of a "satisfying" nature. The music was well and firmly rendered. The "Moonlight Sonata," in the adagio sostenuto of which the pianist was more deliberative than some artists who yet render the beautiful movement thoughtfully, interested the audience throughout. No new readings were attempted, probably none were desired, and both in the allegretto and the presto agitato acceptance was won. The Chopin group included four of the most popular examples of that composer's genius, and amongst these Miss Dearn best realised reposeful charm of the "Prelude Op. 28 No. 15," the "Butterfly" Etude being as often the medium of a tour de force on the part of visiting stars that the rendering suffered by comparison. Miss Dearn, who was warmly applauded, closed her evening with a "Romance" and a "Study in Valse form," by Sibelius and Saint Saens respectively.

GERMAN COLONIAL POLICY.

It is well to remember that at the Peace Conference each specific proposal will be judged by certain general principles which have been already formulated and agreed upon by the Allied States. In some cases the application can only be made with difficulty and after a compromise. It will, for instance, be impossible thoroughly to carry out the principle of nationality in remodelling the map of the Balkans or of Austria-Hungary. In other cases, however, the application of the principle will be limited only by the inability of statesmen to look into the future. The Allies are resolved that this war is to give mankind the two blessings of freedom and security. The sacrifice of thousands of lives is not to be justified by the appropriation or the opening of this or that market, but by the defence of national and individual liberty and the readjustment of boundaries in such a way that there will be a check on all aggressive tendencies in the future. All the claims of the Allies—the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine, the evacuation and restoration of Belgium, the recovery and enlargement of Servia—satisfy these tests. The Allies assume their power to force on Germany the terms of peace decided upon amongst themselves, but they contend that their treaty will be framed in the interests not of themselves alone but of the whole world. It is by their test that they will decide the question of the return of the German colonies. The war would not be prolonged for a day for the sake of the trade which Germany derived before the war from her oversea possessions, or for the difference between the trade which goes to a foreign Power and to a Power united by some political tie. Nor would any serious statesman regard it as an object worth fighting for that Germany should be prevented from becoming economically self-sufficient, or from satisfying an ill-defined megalomania. The test will in all cases be the test of security, together with the responsibility which the British have assumed towards native races. They cannot again allow the enemy to be established in harbours and wireless stations which have been selected as bases for an attack on one of the Dominions. They cannot allow him to return to territory from which he has attempted to foment a rebellion against a friendly Government. It is a relatively small matter that the Germans, before the war, attempted to concentrate trade in their own hands through export and shipping monopolies. They gained many of their privileges through the carelessness, the acquiescence, or the indolence of their rivals and through their own diligence. They do not yet, however, understand that their future as a colonial Power will be decided by the spirit in which they used their possessions in the past, and by the possibilities for mischief which would be afforded by their return. One of the chief commercial papers in Germany urges the Chancellor to use the control of Belgium as a counter with which to bargain for the return of the German colonies. Unquestionably the peace treaty will fall short of the dreams entertained by small sections in all of the Allied countries. But it will not be the sort of compromise arranged by bargaining one part of the war map against another. It will be framed in the interests of the future security, and amongst others by British statesmen who will speak for the Empire as a whole, not for a number of disintegrated parts each attempting to establish its own interests at the expense of the other.

There is obviously a tendency in the German Press for each of the many interests in the community to insist that it shall be safeguarded at the Peace Conference at the expense of every other. At the beginning of the war, and for some two years afterwards, all these interests were united in a common belief that Germany was about to possess the whole world. Herr Ballin and his shipping friends were to be free from the "watery triangle" or the Bight of Heligoland, and to have new harbours, including Antwerp, on the Belgian coast. Dr. Solf and his friends were to have the German colonies, the French colonies added to them, together with the Belgian Congo; the Mid Europe party was to have an economic union with Austria and Turkey; the pan-Germans were to have Belgium, part of France, Poland, and a highway through Europe to the Persian Gulf. At no time were these parties in sympathy with each other except in so far as they were united by a vague ambition for world-power. The colonial party insisted that Germany must be self-sufficient so that all the raw material from her factories could be found within her own territories; the pan-Germans answered that, as long as she had sea-power, colonies would come of themselves; the agrarians clung to Bismarck's tradition of predominance in Europe, and professed to be able to satisfy all the needs of their countrymen by going abroad. The idea of a colonial empire came to be looked upon as un-German in contradistinction to the very tangible idea of an economic and military system giving Germany a dominating influence from Hamburg to the Persian Gulf. It is possible that Sir Stanley Maude's successes have dimmed the belief which has been entertained for so many years in the possibilities of Mesopotamia as an agricultural province which would supply food for great manufacturing populations in Europe. For some reason at any rate we now find independent German newspapers demonstrating the need for colonies after the war, and insisting that they can be made strong enough with fleets, coaling stations, and native armies to hold out against the Power in control of their communications. It is a melancholy fact for the Germans that when war broke out they were on the point of securing great colonial concessions by treaty. They had taken over parts of the French possessions in West Africa, they had the right of pre-emption over Belgian Congo, and they were on the point of acquiring Portuguese colonies by purchase. In Asia their concessions were extended to the Persian Gulf. Their trade had increased beyond that of any other nation in the British colonies, and in Egypt, in South America, they were aiming at a monopoly through the support given by their Government to private enterprise. However generously they are treated in the future not one of these advances will be retained. Some will be applied to the compensation of nations who have suffered in Europe; others will be confiscated because it has been discovered that they have been used to undermine and to destroy the rights of friendly and peaceful neighbours.

STATE EMPLOYEES' PRIVILEGES.

In the statement made by the Acting Premier yesterday the annual cost of privileges—holidays, travelling facilities, and so forth—granted to railway and tramway employees alone, is set down at more than a million sterling. This, no doubt, may be discounted in part by the fact that the travelling expenses of the staff, in the details disclosed, represent so much cash but do not necessarily involve money expended. Certain provisions must be made for the general working of the railways and tramways to serve the public; and since carriages and transport facilities are provided for passengers day in and day out through the year, it cannot involve a great additional outlay to carry the staff when on leave. Neither need the concessions in travelling to work run into high figures, though it must all necessarily involve extra clerical and traffic commitments. More than a million sterling is not spent by the State to help out the staff with holidays and to carry it to and from work and play. But the point is that if the staff had to pay like everybody else for all the travelling done by rail and tram the public revenue would undoubtedly benefit to a considerable extent and the taxpayer would be relieved accordingly. To which a further objection will, perhaps, be made that if railway and tramway employees had to pay for these special privileges, like the rest of the travelling public, considerably less money than the items specified would be represented in the increase to the public revenue, for they would become careful like other people and oftentimes not travel afar for a jaunt. A rejoinder, however, can be offered even to this objection, in that the travelling public complains of railway and tramway employees on leave. There is overcrowding and discomfort with the holiday-making staff in the best seats. But, whether or no, while less travelling would mean less money collected it would also tend to reduced expenses. So the general argument might continue ad infinitum, with possibly no satisfaction for either side. But for the taxpayer, as the principal person concerned, the question will still be asked why special privileges should be added to special pay. On the Acting Premier's showing the employees of the Railway Department are better paid already than employees in private enterprises. Fitters, for instance, are not only given more per day than fitters outside the service, but their superannuation and holiday allowances make the remuneration exceedingly attractive by comparison. The same thing must apply all round, one would imagine; and yet the railway and tramway employees precipitated the strike out of which we are just emerging. It is a most extraordinary paradox!

Perhaps the fairest way to deal with the whole question is to assume that the State must set an example as employer and not be forced to follow one from private employment. But if it is to pay more in salaries and wages and to grant special privileges, the taxpayer ought to feel that he is getting value for his money. That is to say, the State employee ought to be capable of setting a good example to other employees. State employment ought to represent the blue ribbon of industry, not because it means the "Government stroke," but because teams of well selected men and women specially paid would be seen to give the best results. Shrewd Americans are finding it good business to be liberal in allowing advantages and granting privileges to their employees. They have discovered, among other things, that it pays to provide hot meals at the middle of the day, sometimes free, so as to keep their operatives from the stimulants and snacks at midday which stand for a meal but which result in a substantially lessened output for the ending half of the day's work. Thus, if the million sterling represented by the Railway Department's concessions was reimbursed in better work, in a keener interest in details, in a larger output in proportion hour for hour, and in a finer spirit of service than in private employment, the taxpayer would be the gainer. Can it be said that this has been the result in the past? During the strike a great deal was said about the management and organisation of the Railway Department, and the heads were bitterly assailed. Lack of efficient control has been alleged to account for evident slacking, wastefulness, direct dishonesty, and at last in effect a direct attempt to smash the Government of the country. The thing is absurd upon the face of it. The Railway Commissioners are business men with a business enterprise upon their hands which must pay its way. They must get results, and they have given their employees privileges and concessions which other employees never get. It is foolish to allege that everything is going to pieces through their incompetence, and that they are tyrants and taskmasters into the bargain. But clearly in future this million of money will be kept in mind. It does represent something substantial; and the staff of the Railway Department has to justify its appearance upon the records as a definite addition to salaries and wages already above the average outside. The strike has given the chance of a new start, and in the anxious and troublous times ahead State servants will have to prove themselves just as capable of holding their positions by becoming indispensable as the rest of the working public who have to deal with private employers.

PERSONAL.

The Premier (Mr. Holman) is expected to reach Sydney at the end of the month. Mrs. Holman will arrive this morning.

Sir Samuel Griffith, Chief Justice of the High Court of Australia, arrived in Sydney from Brisbane, on his way to Melbourne, yesterday. Sir Samuel has been ill for a considerable time. Though his trip to Melbourne is chiefly in furtherance of his convalescence, he confidently anticipates being able to return to the Bench by the time the High Court sits in Sydney a month hence.

A cable message which has been received in Sydney announces that Dr. T. H. Fiaschi is returning. Dr. Fiaschi left about May, 1915, as officer in charge of No. 2 Australian General Hospital, which comprised 1050 beds, and staff composed of leading medical men from each State. They went direct to London, the idea being that the hospital was to be sent to Etaples, but at the last moment they were ordered to proceed to Lemnos Island, where Dr. Fiaschi established early in August a tent hospital on a portion known as Turk's Head. Almost immediately afterwards (on August 5) occurred the Suvla Bay landing, and the first patients to arrive were 750 wounded from there. About four months later Dr. Fiaschi was himself taken seriously ill, and was taken to Wandsworth Hospital in England, where he remained for several months. When he had completely recovered he offered his services to the Italian army, with which he has since been serving.

Commissioner Hay, chief officer of the Salvation Army in Australia, arrives by the Brisbane mail this morning, and will give a lecture in the Auburn Town Hall to-night.

Mr. Justice R. M. Sly, accompanied by his associate, Mr. W. J. Bradley, B.A., left last night for the northern circuit. His Honor will preside at the Supreme Court at Newcastle to-day, and at Tamworth on the 19th instant.

At yesterday's meeting of the New South Wales Chamber of Manufactures the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Mr. W. T. Willington; vice-presidents, Mr. A. D. Walker and Mr. J. Clifton Love; treasurer, Mr. Chas. Anderson.

Mr. William Winn has received word that his son, Captain Roy Winn, M.C., of the R.A.A.M.C., who was wounded recently in France, losing a foot, has been promoted to major.

Captain G. L. Phillips, of the A.I.F., son of Dr. Gordon Phillips, of Warwick, Queensland, was recently presented with the Freedom of Haverfordwest, Wales, by the Mayor. Captain Phillips, who has for the past 12 months been in command of a camp in the Australian Command Depot in England, has been transferred to the A.I.F. Headquarters staff as A.D.C. to Major-General M'Cay, C.B., V.D., the G.O.C., A.I.F., in the United Kingdom.

Mr. E. G. Fletcher, of Mosman, has received a cable with the information that his son, Lieutenant H. Bowden Fletcher, has joined the Flying Corps.

THE "SYDNEY MAIL."

Under the heading "Crusaders of the Southern Cross in the Holy Land," the "Mail" this week publishes a number of very interesting pictures of the Australian Light Horse in Palestine. One of these (drawn from a photograph) shows a squadron passing through a native village, with a background of ancient ruins. It is well worth framing. There are pictures from the Western front, and many portraits of Australian soldiers who have been decorated, and groups of fighting families, as well as portraits of killed and wounded heroes. The V.A.D. parade in Sydney on Saturday last is the subject of a fine page photograph. A capitally illustrated article deals with the cocoanut industry in Papua. The Melbourne Show is pictorially treated, and prominence is given to the A.J.C. Spring Meeting. The Women's section contains much useful information, and there are some capital poems which will doubtless find a place in many a reader's scrapbook.

AN ISLAND MYSTERY.

STRANGE CRAFT AT AITUTAKI.

WAS IT A RAIDER?

The cable in yesterday's "Herald" regarding the exploits of the German armed raiders in the South Pacific may throw light on a mystery connected with the visit of a strange vessel to Aitutaki, one of the Cook Islands, at the beginning of last month.

On September 1 an oil launch, 27ft long, with a mast and jib and mainsail, and with her deck all covered with tarpaulins, put into Aitutaki. She flew no flag. The Government agent (Mr. Duncan), with the other Europeans resident on the island, interviewed the arrivals to ascertain the cause of their visit, and were informed that the launch was the Cecilie, of Honolulu, chartered from H. Hackfeldt and Co., of Honolulu, by Mr. Southart and Mr. van Houten. The two latter were on board. Mr. Southart claimed to be an American citizen, and Mr. van Houten said he was the son of a Norwegian shipowner of America. The story was that the voyage was made in consequence of a wager made in a Dutch club at San Francisco that they would not make a voyage from Honolulu to the Cook Islands and return to Honolulu in an open launch. The crew comprised four men, who were set forth as three Norwegians and a Dutchman, with Van Houten as commander and Southart as navigating officer. Both these men spoke English with a strong foreign accent. They claimed to have come from San Francisco to Honolulu in a new steamer named the Vancouver, and left Honolulu in the launch Cecilie on July 28. They also claimed to have landed at Papeete, Tahiti, and entered that port under the escort of a French torpedo boat. From there they called at the island of Mopeha, which is evidently the same island as was referred to in yesterday's cable, though it was spelt "Nopeha" in the message. This island, it may be mentioned, lies to the north-east of the Cook group, and is leased by an Auckland firm, who have cocoanut plantations on it. After calling at Mopeha, the visitors stated that they went to Rarotonga, but did not land, coming on to Aitutaki instead.

Now comes the mysterious aspect of the affair. The visitors were asked for their log-book, their reply being that it had not been written up for eight or ten days, and had been blown overboard. Their flag was asked for, but could not be produced. Their passports were asked for, but could not be produced. Neither were there any documents to verify their call at Tahiti. No papers whatever could be produced to verify their statement that they had come from Honolulu. The only book that could be found was the log of the vessel, "W. C. Slade," Smith, master, on a voyage from Eureka, California, to Sydney. On being questioned as to their possession of this book, they replied that it had been given to them by Hackfeldt, of Honolulu, as a guide for their voyage. Their time book—chronometer—was printed in a foreign language, which they said was Dutch. No name was painted or visible on the boat. When asked for further credentials, they produced a canvas bag of gold, which they emptied out into a kerosene can for exhibition to the onlookers on the wharf. There appeared to be about £300 in gold visible. The two men wore khaki coats, with brass buttons bearing an anchor, and white helmets. Revolvers were seen in the lockers.

A Norwegian living on the island spoke to the crew in the Norwegian language, and appeared satisfied that they were Scandinavians. No questions were asked of news of the war, neither were there inquiries made for newspapers. The strangers reported that on their return they would write up a narrative of their voyage for an American magazine. Inquiries were made as to whether there was wireless at Aitutaki or Rarotonga.

After a stay of six hours the Cecilie resumed her voyage. The native population of Aitutaki was much excited at this foreign visit, being of the impression that the strangers were German spies. Threats were made by certain natives that they would seize the launch, but as there was no direct evidence against them the visitors were permitted to depart in peace.

The men who landed on the wharf were very neat and well dressed, and showed no appearance of having travelled thousands of miles in an open boat. Both were clean-shaven, and had more the appearance of having just stepped off an ocean liner. They were not in want of water or provisions.

VESSELS THAT HAVE BEEN LOST.

The vessels mentioned in the cables yesterday are, with the exception of the schooner Rosedale, well-known traders between Sydney and the Pacific Coast. The name Rosedale is probably a cable mutilation and meant for R. C. Slade. No vessel named Rosedale is mentioned in Lloyds' and neither do the harbour records show the arrival or departure of such a ship. The date of her departure given in the cable—April 24—is the date on which the R. C. Slade sailed. She has not since been heard of. The R. C. Slade was loaded in Sydney by Messrs. Horwood and Co., who are the local agents for most of the Pacific coast sailing vessels, with about 700 tons of copra for Messrs. Burns Philp and Co., Ltd. The R. C. Slade sailed in charge of Captain Haldon Smith.

The Winslow was a 4-m schooner of 567 tons, owned by G. E. Billings, of San Francisco. She was loaded in May by Messrs. Horwood and Co. with a general cargo for Apia, sailing from Sydney on May 24. At Apia the Winslow was to have loaded copra for San Francisco, but she never reached port. Her master, Captain Truget, was well known in Sydney.

The Manila was a wooden 4-m schooner, of 731 tons, owned by J. A. Hooper, of San Francisco. She had finished a voyage from Sydney, and was on a fresh trip elsewhere.

The A. B. Johnson was a wooden 4-m schooner, of 529 tons, owned by Wilson Bros. and Co., of San Francisco. She was due here with lumber, after which she was to have been chartered to Messrs. Horwood and Co.

The Wairuna, previously known as the Matoppo, was a cargo steamer of 3947 tons, owned by the Union S.S. Co., Ltd. The Wairuna was bound from Wellington to San Francisco with a general cargo, consisting of kauri gum, hemp, pelts, copra, and cocoa.

REPRISALS.

CONDEMNED BY BISHOP LONG

BATHURST, Monday.

The decision of the British authorities to bomb German cities was referred to by Bishop Long in All Saints' Cathedral last night. He said that he could see in the pronouncement of General Smuts, the one really great man whom the Dominions have contributed to the old country, a shudder at the turn of events. The decision seemed to have been arrived at that a further act must be undertaken to add to the horror of war.

"I cannot help feeling," he added, "how that decision will press upon the consciences of many people. I know there are quite a number of vulgarians in our midst who will not stop to ponder or think of how great is the peril of tampering with the conscience in public affairs. These vulgarians will talk in blood and thunder and revenge. They are full of talk. They have ample time for the writing of anonymous letters, and, apparently, their chief contribution to their country at such a time is the paying of the postage. They are, however, but a fraction, and the rest of the people will always feel with horror and hatred the indignity of being drawn into such a competition in frightfulness. It seems to be quite impossible to distinguish between the area of what is called reprisals and the area of military necessity. Mere revenge must be condemned by man as long as he calls himself a Christian. A man is a contemptible hypocrite in calling himself a Christian, and attempting to justify mere reprisals. Never let us forget at a time like this that the greatest hell that could befal us would be the winning of the war and the losing of our souls—the defeating of Germany and the defeating of our own ethical life, the dethronement of conscience from the central place in the affairs of man, and the installing of some lesser God of expediency. The conscience that says we should bomb the Germans and wipe out their cities must be cast out. We have advanced from the ape type. Let us think not only in terms of nationalism, but in terms of humanism."

RELIEVING DISTRESS

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

VISIT BY MINISTER.

Considerable distress now exists amongst some thousands of women and children, as the result of the strike, which has now happily been settled, and the Government has taken steps to alleviate the sufferings of those in need.

Yesterday morning meetings in connection with the Government's relief scheme were held, and committees formed for the distribution of food orders at Glebe, Marrickville, Darlington, and Rockdale. The Attorney-General, Mr. Hall, made special visits to these districts.

Mr. Storey found that on Saturday 76 families were relieved, and acting on instructions from the Government the society kept open until 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. The institution was also open on Sunday, and yesterday 470 families were dealt with up till 3 o'clock in the afternoon. In no instance was any legitimate case refused, and in some, acting under authority, fares were provided to enable women and children to carry the provisions to their homes.

The allowances granted in each case, said Mr. Storey, are adequate for the maintenance of the home, including bread, flour, tea, sugar, meat, rice, sago, wheatmeal, golden syrup, jam, tinned milk, and vegetables. One of the features in connection with the relief is that, not only are the adults and the children of the family provided for, but for the babies special provision is made, and where the mother is unable to provide the artificial food which is necessary for young children, where they require special nourishment, or where milk is required, provision is made to meet their needs. Another point which is emphasised is the quality of the food. The bread, meat, tea, and other supplies are all of first-class quality. The arrangements for handling the applicants have so far been most successful, and they have been dealt with as if they were shopping in the ordinary way.

Mr. Storey added that he was exceedingly pleased at the manner in which the unfortunate people were being dealt with. He instructed the secretary to proceed as he had started, and impressed upon him to make no difference where the people were in distress arising from the strike or those indirectly suffering through it. The Minister inspected the building, the quality of the food, and the whole of the surroundings, and considered that no more fitting source of remedy could be brought into existence for distributing relief at the present juncture. He was specially interested in the facilities that were given so that people were not kept waiting. Fully 100 people were being attended to while he was there, and the meat was fresh and as good as could be purchased anywhere. Women did not feel in any sense that they were receiving charity, nor had they the appearance of it.

The Minister considered that it was a blessed thing that such an institution was in existence to meet any emergency that might arise, and he commended the claims of the institution for financial support from all those who are in affluent circumstances. "Promptitude," he concluded, "is the keynote of the whole of the operations, illustrating the familiar maxim: 'He who gives quickly gives twice.'"

AT THE TOWN HALL.

There were some pitiable scenes in the basement of the Town Hall yesterday, when over 600 applicants for relief from the Lord Mayor's Distress Fund were dealt with. Mothers, with babies in arms, and women well up in years had their wants attended to. "On Friday we dealt with 900 cases, when 1500 loaves of bread, 900 rabbits, 70lb of groceries, and £72 in cash were distributed," said Mrs. Burns, one of the joint hon. secretaries of the fund, when seen yesterday. "A further 600 cases were attended to to-day. These people are absolutely destitute. Some are in debt to the landlord, and others are on the verge of starvation. During the day several women fainted owing to the lack of nourishment." Mrs. Burns added that the committee was hopeful of receiving a portion of the Government funds to assist the good work which was being carried on. The amounts already acknowledged total £245 17s 6d.

The following additional donations have been made:—Mr. T. A. Field, £10; Mr. H. Jerome, £2/2/; Canon Boyce and Mrs. E. M'Donald, £1/1/ each; Nurse O'Connell, £1; Mrs. Gillies, 10/; some workers, 12/; Miss F. Wilson, 6/; smaller donations, £7/13/6.

Yesterday afternoon the Acting Minister for Health (Mr. David Storey), representing the Acting Premier and Chief Secretary (Mr. Fuller) paid a visit to the Benevolent Society.

LORD MAYOR'S STATEMENT.

In a minute presented at the meeting of the City Council last night, and which was referred to the finance committee, the Lord Mayor recommended that a sum of £1000 should be voted from the city fund, and placed at the disposal of the executive committee, of which he is chairman, for distribution, the whole of the receipts and disbursements by such committee being subject to strict inquiry and audit. While objection might be taken to the fact that the statutory obligations of the council precluded the application of the city fund to purposes other than those prescribed by statute, the circumstances, to his mind, justified a departure in this instance. "Knowing from personal observation and inquiry that acute distress does prevail," the Lord Mayor added, "I have no hesitation in stating that the council is justified in taking steps to alleviate this distress by every means in its power. I, therefore, submit the recommendation, and, in order that no time may be lost in placing means at the disposal of the committee, whereby relief may be promptly and effectively administered, I have convened a special meeting of the finance committee for Tuesday, 9th inst., and propose to convene a special meeting of the council for Thursday, 11th inst., to receive and consider the report and recommendations of the committee."

Asked by Alderman Gulhen if it was proposed to afford relief by employing men on wood-blocking and other council work, the Lord Mayor said that any practical suggestion in the direction indicated would receive favourable consideration at his hands.

Alderman Farrell, who passed a subscription list round the council chamber last night received £91 4s. Among those who contributed were the Lord Mayor, £25; Alderman Joynton Smith, £25; Alderman Hagon, £5 5s; Alderman J. S. Brunton, £5 5s; Alderman Sir Allen Taylor, £5; Alderman T. H. Kelly, £5, and Alderman Clarence Bridge, £3 3s.

NEWCASTLE DISTRESS.

NEWCASTLE, Monday.

The Mayor of Newcastle (Alderman R. G. Kilgour) sent the following telegram this afternoon to the Acting Premier:—"Newcastle distress very pronounced. Kindly grant immediate assistance to relieve the present wants of those in need."

The matter was also discussed by the council to-night.

Mr. J. L. Fegan, superintendent of the Newcastle and Northumberland Benevolent Society, said to-night that about £100 a week would relieve the distress in the district at the present time. The residents of Carrington were suffering most.

The Trades Hall relief committee has issued 2500 vouchers for the payment of £1400 since the strike commenced.

QUEENSLAND SHIPPING.

RECOMMISSIONING VESSELS.

BRISBANE, Monday.

The Brisbane seamen and firemen this morning presented themselves for work, and active preparations are being made to recommission the steamers which have been laid up in port for many weeks. The A.U.S.N. Company's Mallina will leave Brisbane for Newcastle and Sydney in order to be in a position to re-enter the cargo service between Sydney, Brisbane, and Rockhampton on Saturday week. The Arawatta will be despatched from Brisbane to Sydney and Melbourne next Saturday, and the Wyandra, which is being overhauled at this port, is expected to leave for Sydney and Melbourne on Saturday week. Messrs. Howard, Smith, Limited, will probably despatch the Cooma for Sydney and Melbourne on Wednesday, and the Adelaide Company's steamer is expected to leave for Sydney to-morrow. A number of vessels will also be despatched to the northern Queensland ports during the week.

MARRIED MEN'S OFFER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Referring to the letter under this head in your issue of to-day, I shall be pleased to contribute 10/ weekly. If there is no organisation to deal with such a matter I will take charge of other subscriptions, however, small, and see that the money is properly distributed every week and duly accounted for. Should subscriptions become important, I would suggest a small committee of control.

I am, etc.,

N. GUTHRIDGE.

KILLED IN ACTION.

LIEUT.-COL. A. H. SCOTT, D.S.O.

News reached Sydney yesterday that Lieut.-Colonel Alan Humphrey Scott, D.S.O., who commanded a battalion of the A.I.F., was killed in action on September 30, death being instantaneous. He was the second son of Mr. Donald Hyde Scott, of Edgmond, Wahroonga, and of the Pitt-street branch of the Commercial Banking Company, of Sydney; and was a nephew of Mr. Justice Street. He was born at Tumut 26 years ago, and educated at the Sydney Preparatory and Sydney Grammar schools. Once his school days were over he entered the office of Dalgety and Co., but found time over and above his commercial duties to take a keen interest in military matters, and joined the old Sydney Scottish Regiment. When that regiment was disbanded he was placed on the reserve of officers, with the rank of lieutenant.

The commencement of hostilities, however, proved too strong a call for a man such as Lieutenant Scott was, and he resigned his position with the firm to join a battalion. He was placed in charge of a company, and was retained in that position until the formation of double companies, when he became second in command, Captain Milson, killed in action at Lone Pine Ridge, being his O.C. He also received his captaincy, and showed how thoroughly he deserved it by the manner in which he carried out all duties allotted to him, and the way he led his men on the occasion of the memorable landing at Gallipoli on April 25, 1915. "Scotts' Point," close to "MacLaurin's Hill," is named after him, and was the farthest spot reached on the day of landing.

Lieut.-Colonel Scott was the first Grammar School boy to be awarded the D.S.O. At that time he held the rank of captain, and the distinction was conferred upon him, according to the official account, for conspicuous gallantry in holding on to an exposed position at Lone Pine Ridge until all the wounded had been removed. Later, when he was compelled to retire in the face of a heavy bomb attack, he led a bayonet charge, retaking an important position. He was promoted major, and after the evacuation went to France.

Lieut.-Colonel Scott took an active part in sports as well as in military matters, and held the record high jump, 6ft, for New South Wales for some time, and also the record for the Australasian high jump together with Kelly, of Melbourne. He was a member of East Sydney Amateur Athletic Club.

His two brothers are still at the front—Major William John Rendell Scott, D.S.O.; and Lieutenant Lee Scott.

IMPORTANT JUDGMENT.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

Reserved decision was given by Mr. Justice Barton, sitting in the High Court, in an appeal brought by Richard Henry Mears, of R. H. Mears Pty., Ltd., pastoralists, of N.S.W., who objected to the amended assessment by the Commonwealth Commissioner in regard to his income for the year ended June, 1915. It was stated that the dividend declared by the company was considerably larger than the profits of the year, and the Commissioner assessed the appellant's income on his share of the dividend, the dividends having been paid from accumulated profits held in an appropriation account. The question which the Court had to decide was whether these accumulated profits were still to be considered as part of the profit and loss account of the company or not. His Honor was of the opinion that the term "profit and loss account" used in the proviso meant the account which showed the profit and loss of the year not merely as confined to the year, but including funds brought forward from previous years, or those carried forward to the next year, and this might be shown in one or more accounts. The profit and loss account was that which accountants generally understood as something showing the true position of the company. The appeal was dismissed, with costs.

NEW ZEALAND FINANCES.

WELLINGTON, Monday.

Indications are that, chiefly on account of the war, the Minister for Finance will shortly be forced to submit to Parliament proposals for largely increased taxation and a loan for an extra four millions, in addition to the 24 millions of revenue already being raised very successfully.

With the cool stores congested both of meat and cheese, a falling revenue and increasing expenditure, it is anticipated that the closing hours of the session will be exceedingly important to Dominion taxpayers.

FEDERAL TAXATION.

ORGANISING OPPOSITION.

A meeting in connection with the Commercial and Industrial Federation of Australia, which was inaugurated a fortnight ago, was held at the Chamber of Commerce Hall yesterday, to receive the report of the provisional committee respecting the progress made, and to adopt the platform and manifesto. Mr. Barton Addison presided.

The platform set out as immediate objects opposition to the War-time Profits Tax, to "unscientific, arbitrary taxation of specified individuals," by the eligibles tax, and immediate amendment of the Federal Land Tax and Progressive Rating acts, electoral reform, and development of commercial and industrial interests. A number of matters were set down for activity after the war.

Mr. W. Harding, chairman of the Provisional Committee, reported receipt of a telegram that the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce was meeting that day to take action similar to that in Sydney. Mr. Thos. H. Brown, a big business man of Brisbane, was moving actively along the same lines in that city, and people were at work in Adelaide. Replying to a question as to what the Federation's opposition would be worth, Mr. Harding declared that already it was being effective. "The Cabinet," he said, "is already shaking in its shoes since the meeting of a fortnight ago, and two Ministers have expressed themselves as feeling very uncertain of their position." Some members also realised now that they should have been more demonstrative in their opposition to the taxation of war-time profits and single men, seeing that seven times the anticipated revenue could be obtained in another way, which would hurt no one, and by which everyone would pay an equitable share. It would be five years before the War-time Profits Tax could be got into operation. "When the people speak with one voice, as they will do," continued Mr. Harding, "you will find the Government will be very ready to climb down. Further, I may tell you that if the Government does not climb down now it will have to do so in the end, because the measure is so absolutely impossible that it will break its own neck. You will find the Government will be prepared to climb down—in fact, it hopes that the people will kick with sufficient determination to enable it to say it had passed the measure according to compact, but could climb down because it knew the measure was impossible."

The platform and manifesto were adopted.

DEATH OF MILITARY CROSS HERO

Mrs. J. Richards, of Goldsmith-street, Goulburn, has received news of the death of her only son, Captain George James Richards, M.C. Enlisting as a private, he went to Rabaul, and was later sent to Gallipoli, being one of the second landing party. He participated in several severe engagements, including Lone Pine. After the evacuation he distinguished himself in France, and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant, and later to that of captain, and was awarded the Military Cross. He was 25 years of age, and was a native of Goulburn. He was formerly employed in the clerical branch of the Railway Department in Sydney.

STRIKE LESSONS.

LOYALISTS THANKED.

ENTERTAINED BY GOVERNMENT.

It was at Vaucluse House that the Constitution of the State was drawn up. Across the hill, at Nielsen Park, and almost within cooee of that historic old home, the Government yesterday expressed its earnest thanks to several thousand loyalists for having helped it, in one of the most critical periods of the country, to preserve the authority vested in it by that same priceless document. The loyalists' camp at the Cricket Ground will be closed up to-day, but for the immediate present a few men will remain in camp at Taronga Park. To all intents and purposes, however, the loyalists' camp movement is a closed book, and on the eve of their departure for their homes 2000 or more of the men and many of their womenfolk were yesterday the guests of the Government on an excursion round the harbour and later at Nielsen Park, where, in a large marquee, they were served with refreshments. The big gathering, to the accompaniment of music by the Lone Pine Band, left Fort Macquarie at about 1 o'clock in the steamers Koree, Kiringal, and Kuramia, and also a small motor launch, and the outing was thoroughly enjoyed, although made under a leaden sky. Among the party at the park were the Acting Premier (Mr. Fuller), the Minister for Labour and Industry (Mr. Beeby), the Acting Treasurer (Mr. Fitzpatrick), the Minister for Works (Mr. Ball), the Minister for Education (Mr. James), the Solicitor-General (Mr. Garland), the Attorney-General (Mr. Hall), Mr. A. K. Trethowan, M.L.C. (commandant at the Cricket Ground camp), Colonel Spain (commandant at Taronga Park), the Industrial Registrar (Mr. J. B. Holme), Messrs. C. W. Oakes, W. E. Wearne, A. H. Grimm, F. J. Thomas, T. J. Hoskins, W. A. Zuill, P. M'Garry, and J. Perry, Ms.L.A., and the president of the Nielsen Park trust, Mr. Frank Lock.

"From all parts of the State," said Mr. Fuller, addressing the men, "you responded to the Government's call when constituted authority was threatened. As the representatives of the people, we felt it our duty, when faced with the crisis through which we have just passed, that constitutional authority should be upheld, and that those men who wished to establish mob rule in our midst should be put down. From the start, the Government had to be firm. If a Government is going to succeed, it must know its own mind. This Government knew its own mind, and placed its attitude clearly and distinctly before the people." The Government, the Acting Premier went on, was fortified also with the knowledge that it had a just and righteous cause, and that, because of it, it had behind it the great body of people, not only of the State, but of the Commonwealth. The loyalists had helped materially to bring the crisis to a successful termination. Nothing that the Government could do would recompense the great majority of them for the loss which they suffered in leaving their own interests, but they would always have the glorious satisfaction that they had stood by their country at a time of crisis. (Applause.) Mr. Fuller expressed thanks to everyone who had assisted the movement, especially the ladies' committees, and he hoped that before the week was out industrial matters would revert to normal.

It was with emphasis that he spoke of men in our midst who, he said, in many instances had come from other parts of the world, and who had no allegiance to the grand old flag under which we lived—men who had stirred up strife in our industrial life. "We are determined," he proceeded, "that the true, honest working man in our midst shall get proper value for his work and industry, but we are equally determined to keep out of these various industries those men who upset our industrial life, and who in this instance stopped the wheels of industry. With the amended industrial legislation in operation we look forward to a better state of things between employer and employee. These relations, we hope, will be of a more amicable and peaceful character."

Mr. Fuller expressed the Government's obligation to the Victorian and South Australian Governments for the assistance afforded it during the strike, and concluded, "I propose to have something sent to every one of you as soon as possible as a memorial, which you can hand down to generations yet unborn, and which will show that in the time of crisis in 1917 you did your duty to the Government and the country." (Applause.)

The Minister for Labour and Industry, Mr. Beeby, prefaced what he regarded as some lessons of the strike with the observation that the Government had been dealing with a spirit of revolt which had sprung up in this country, and which had called for strong and decisive action by the Government, and also by every loyal citizen. "The greatest surprise that Australia ever had," said Mr. Beeby, "was the response to the call for volunteers to assist the Government in this crisis. Without desiring to offend trade unionism, I think we have established this rule: That, in future, large bodies of men cannot go on strike and a month afterwards claim to come back exactly as they knocked off. In the future the community will weigh the justice of their position, and if it is unjust the community will be prepared to say that men who are responsible for the holding up of the community shall not have the right to return to the positions which they formerly occupied." Mr. Beeby spoke of class warfare as an unnatural condition of affairs in a democracy, and said that the right on the part of men to have their say through the ballot box was alone the factor to determine the future social progress of the community. He also expressed the Government's thanks to those who, suddenly confronted with the organisation of 7000 men, had done so much to make the loyalists' movement a success. They had been told that men who went into the coal mines would be killed. The fact was that eleven collieries had worked for an average of five weeks, and not one man had been killed, nor was there one serious accident in those mines. "The whole experiment," concluded Mr. Beeby, "has been successful. If ever men again throw down the insolent challenge that was presented by the railway men when they issued their ultimatum every one of you, I am sure, will come back, and ten thousand more with you." (Applause.)

Mr. Trethowan, in briefly returning thanks, said that the camp had been remarkable for its orderliness. Not a blow had been struck in anger there.

Rousing cheers for the Government, coupled with the names of Mr. Fuller and Mr. Beeby, closed proceedings.

FUNCTION AT CRICKET GROUND.

Several guests were entertained at supper at the volunteers' camp on the Sydney Cricket Ground last night. Mr. Walter J. S. Hall was presented by the staff of No. 1 dining-room with an address and purse of sovereigns. Gifts were also handed to Messrs. Payling, M'Lellan, Ball, and Malone. The lastnamed, who is a well-known racecourse detective, was presented with an umbrella by the staff of special constables attached to the camp.

Mr. D. R. Hall (Attorney-General), who proposed "The Staff," made incidental reference to "the loyalty of Ministers to each other."

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT AS BUYER.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, has just completed an arrangement for the sale to Great Britain of 30,000 tons of butter, representing about £4,530,000.

Some time ago Mr. Hughes offered to the British Government the exportable surplus of butter during the next 12 months, estimated at 30,000 tons, at 149/4 per cwt for first grade, and 1/ less for each point down, with a discount of ½ per cent., payments to be made on the basis of "in store" at the usual port of shipment within 14 days of the butter being placed in cool store. The Commonwealth certificate of quality and weight to be final. At the same time all surplus cheese was offered at 9½d a lb. conditionally that if a higher price be paid for New Zealand and Canadian cheese, then the same rate was to be paid for Australian cheese of a similar quality.

The Prime Minister has been advised that this offer has been accepted, with slight modifications. The Food Controller is prepared to buy between September, 1917, and June, 1918, up to 30,000 tons of butter at 151/ a cwt f.o.b., for first-grade butter, and 1/ less for each grade downwards. Payment is to be made against bills of lading, with interest at 6 per cent.; after 14 days in store the interest to cease on the amount so paid. All storage charges for sellers' account, and all risks until delivery f.o.b., to be the sellers'.

No intimation has been received as to whether the British Government is prepared to accept the offer of cheese. Mr. Hughes stated that the Government has agreed to make advances against butter in store of 1/ per lb. and of 7d per lb against cheese, with interest added. The machinery is available to carry the scheme into effect, and will be under the supervision of the Chief Prices Commissioner.

FLANDERS.

STORIES OF BATTLE.

FATE OF LENS.

EVACUATION POSSIBLE.

LONDON, Oct. 8.

The Geneva correspondent of the "New York Times" says it is reported that the Germans, as a result of the British victories in Flanders, are preparing to evacuate Lens, which has lost its importance from a strategical point of view.

Marshal von Hindenburg, it is expected, will take this step shortly.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

Sir Douglas Haig, in his midnight report on Sunday stated: The weather has been stormy, with heavy rain all day. An attempted enemy advance, south of Reutel, was broken by our fire.

The enemy, at dusk this evening, put down a heavy barrage on the greater part of the front between Broodseinde and Hollebeke. No infantry action followed.

Our aviators, despite unfavourable weather, yesterday dropped one and a half ton of explosives on enemy targets, including railway stations. Our fighting machines went out whenever it was possible. One has failed to return. One of our bombing machines is missing, which went out on Thursday night.

GERMAN STATEMENT.

A German official message on Sunday stated: Continuous and most destructive fire prevails between Poelcapelle and Zandvoorde.

Photographs show great destruction in Dunkirk consequent on our air raids.

FRENCH FRONT.

A French communique issued on Sunday afternoon stated: An artillery duel prevails in the Vauxaillon, Laffaux, and Hurtebise sector, and on the left bank of the Meuse; notably north of Hill 344 and towards Bezonvaux.

We repulsed a powerful raid against Navarin Farm, in the Champagne, and the enemy losses were appreciable.

The latest French communique states: There was no infantry engagement today (Sunday). The artillery duel was sometimes violent in Belgium, on the Aisne, and on the right of the Meuse.

AMERICAN OPINION.

A Washington message says Mr. Baker's third communique shows that American expert military opinion regards the Flanders battle as the greatest yet. It is "wholly unprecedented on the score of its potentialities. The allied ascendancy appears decisive. Air control and shell supply immediately contributed to the success." It is pointed out that the British were attacking the Germans' strongest point, which they regarded as sound strategy. German pressure on the eastern front was relieved. "The British wisdom in maintaining a great density of front, which they believe coefficient to victory, appears justified by the past week's results. They thus were able to deliver a second and third blow. It is most likely that the victory will soon be repeated, and extended. News from the Russian front is most encouraging."

CHASTENED TONE OF GERMAN PRESS.

An Amsterdam report says the German newspapers have adopted a chastened tone, owing to the latest fighting. They no longer claim victory, and only say "Our heroes held out." They excuse the loss of territory on the ground that the object was the saving of valuable human lives, saying "We admire the enemy's determination and contempt for death, and the fury of their storm attacks, but the result is a moderate tactical gain—nothing more. The enemy's fliers are extremely audacious, and repeatedly heavily bombed Courtral and Roulers. They even reached Namur."

The German newspapers show fear of air reprisals, and give prominence to official announcements regarding warnings and taking shelter. Pan-German organs insist on the future danger of an independent Belgium being used as a base for flying attacks against Western Germany.

GERMAN COLONIES.

NO CHANCE OF RESTORATION.

Mr. Frank Simonds, writing to the "New York Tribune," heads a long review of the German colonies with Mr. W. A. Holman's statement that Australia will never allow Germany to regain a footing in New Guinea. Mr. Holman declared "there is no visible reason against New Guinea remaining in our hands."

Mr. Simonds studiously traces Germany's machinations in South Africa. "The decision of Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa regarding the German Colonies," he says, "is final, and has been made." Germany, knowing the doom of the Mittel Europa scheme, is again turning her eyes in the direction of a Mittel Africa; but South Africa must have a say.

"There is no chance of the restoration of the German colonies," he declares, "not because of British, but because of Colonial, sentiment." Germany never approached British genius in dealing with her colonies. She reckoned on the disaffection of the British colonies the world over, and believed she could see the loosening of the British Empire's bonds. It was plain, however, those bonds were strengthened before the first anniversary of the declaration of war.

Mr. Simonds praises the Australians. "The Anzacs' story," he says, "was already part of history when the South Africans began the invasion of East Africa after wiping out German rule in South Africa."

U.S.A. AND WAR.

A New York message states that President Wilson is considering a proposal for the War Trade Council to take over the entire control of foreign commerce.

The special war session of the sixty-fifth congress, which was one of the most important in the history of the United States, ended on Saturday afternoon.

The British Press Bureau announces that the American Embassy in London states that Congress, since April, has voted £2,400,000,000, and has authorised contracts involving £500,000,000 more, the bulk being for war purposes, including loans to the Allies amounting to £1,400,000,000.

COMING OF WINTER.

BATTLE EPISODES.

Mr. Philip Gibbs states: Rain has fallen heavily day and night. The shellcraters already are ponds, brimming over into swamps of mud. Through the mist the British artillery often drumfire, making it hideous for the Germans hauling back their guns behind Passchendaele Ridge.

Winter conditions have come upon us. Along the roads Australian and New Zealand horsemen go riding hard, with their horses' flanks splashed with heavy gobs of mud. Gun waggons and transports pass, flinging up the mud. Similarly the ambulances bring the wounded, cold and wet from the line, but within a few hours they are warm inside the dressing stations, between sandbagged walls, built up inside ruined houses. They are still within shellfire, but are safer than in the open fields.

Among the wounded in the forward dressing station were a tall New Zealander and a wounded German, with a bloody bandage round his head. A friendly voice, speaking in German, said: "How are you getting on?" The German looked up dazed and said: "Better here than on the battlefield." The New Zealander interjected: "Fritz fought all right."

DESPERATE GERMANS.

Chatting together, the New Zealander and other wounded men recalled how a number of German soldiers lying in shellholes after the barrage had passed sniped our officers and men as they swarmed forward, though they knew that by not surrendering they were bound to die. It was the last courage of the human beast at bay.

In one case two such men confronted a divisional general, who was walking ahead of his staff. An aide-de-camp whipped out his revolver, expecting to see the general shot, but the general quietly informed the Germans, who were slightly wounded, that the English had won a very great victory, and if they were good boys he would send up stretcher-bearers to carry them to a dressing station.

There were many human episodes of the battle. After the Australians had marched many miles through the night, over appalling ground, they only reached the place of attack half an hour before the battle started. The story of the night march itself was a little epic, but not the episode I mean. When the Australians reached Broodseinde cross-roads, which was the key position, a dozen men ran out of a blockhouse. The Australians shortened bayonets. Suddenly from the centre of the group a voice shouted in English: "I am a Middlesex man, don't shoot." The caller had his hands up like the rest of the Germans. "It's a spy," shouted an Australian; "kill the blighter." The English voice replied: "I'm English." Finally, it was shown that he belonged to the Middlesex regiment. He had been captured on patrol some days earlier, and the Germans took him to the blockhouse. They could not get out because of our gunfire. His captors treated him well, and shared their food with him, but when the drumfire passed, the Middlesex man knew he had a good chance of being killed by his own troops.

THE PILLBOXES.

The New Zealanders had many fights on the way to Gravenstafel and Abraham Heights. They were surprised at the number of pillboxes and blockhouses. Apparently the Germans thrust little groups of men into the forward blockhouses with orders to hold them at all costs until the German attacking divisions reached them.

In consequence of this proposed attack, the enemy guns laid down a heavy barrage over the British lines half an hour before our attack commenced. The New Zealanders did not escape this shelling. Their brigadiers experienced intense anxiety, not knowing in their dugouts, over which the enemy's fire passed, whether the New Zealand boys were so cut up that a successful assault was impossible. Fortunately, the New Zealanders were not seriously hurt. They were not thrown into disorder, and when the moment came they went over the top like a pack of hounds on a good hunting morning. They had not gone a few yards before they took 50 prisoners. There was a blockhouse just outside the New Zealand assembly line, and the garrison surrendered without a fight. Our gunfire had smashed up the track of a stream near by, making the ground a swamp.

The New Zealand lads had a devil of a time getting through. Some fell into shell holes, and were mud up to their belts. "Give us a hand, Jack," shouted one. "Hang on my rifle, Tom," was the answer. The men on solid ground hauled out those in the slough. This meant a great risk, the barrage travelling on with its protecting screen of shells. The only safety in these battles is to keep close to the barrage. However, the New Zealand lads somehow managed to scramble over 800 yards in time to catch up the barrage.

FIGHT FOR BLOCKHOUSE.

Many blockhouses yielded up batches of prisoners, who were told to "get back and give no trouble." The first fight for a blockhouse took place at Vanmeulen Farm. The New Zealand boys began to drop under bullets from the farm. They were held up for half an hour until the "leapfrog" battalions—that is, the men who were going to pass through the first waves to the next objective, came up to help them. A New Zealand captain, beloved for his gallantry and generous-hearted ways, led the rush of Lewis gunners, bombers, and riflemen. The captain fell dead with a bullet in his heart. With a cry of rage the rest ran on and stormed the blockhouse.

On the left one New Zealand battalion could see the Germans firing from concrete houses on the slopes of Gravenstafel. Although they had to lose the barrage which was sweeping ahead again, the New Zealanders went straight for those places under sharp fire. Some worked round the concrete walls, and hauled out more prisoners. Hardly a New Zealander would go back as escort, so a brigadier, who came out of a dug-out to see what was happening, received the first news of victory from batches of Germans marching in company formation under their own officers without escort.

There was steady machine-gun fire on Abraham Heights until the New Zealanders climbed and routed out the enemy from the dug-outs, which were screened by our barrage. Only the great gallantry of high-spirited youngsters could have done this. The storming of Abraham Heights proves the quality of the New Zealand troops, their keenness to do well, and their recklessness regarding the cost. A lot of prisoners were taken at Abraham Heights.

CAPTURE OF "BERLIN."

The next resistance was at Berlin, which was a row of dirty concrete pill-boxes above a deep cave. German machine-gunners defended the place stubbornly. The New Zealanders brought up Stokes's mortars, and fired 30 rounds in two minutes. Then with a yell the New Zealanders rushed the position from both sides, and flung pea-bombs through the back door until the part of the garrison streamed out, shouting surrender. The other men were dead inside.

The New Zealanders drank soda water and smoked high-class cigarettes, which they discovered in a farm where a battalion commander and his staff were taken prisoner. After refreshment the New Zealanders went on to Berlin Wood, where several pill-boxes were hidden among the fallen trees and mud heaps. They had to make their way through a machine-gun barrage from one house. A German officer directed the fire. When one gun was silenced he came out with another and fired round the corner of the wall until our men rushed. Even then the officer raised his revolver, but was killed by a bayonet thrust.

Elsewhere the English boys were fighting with equal courage, some against even fiercer gunfire. The English opposite Gheluvelt, Polderhoek, and Rimelbeke, endured bad hours.

We hold the outer houses of Gheluvelt. The swamps here are even worse than the New Zealanders encountered. The Englishmen fought forward doggedly, and by sheer valour safeguarded the right wing. The Irishmen astride the Thourout railway also fought recklessly, and the Devons and Scottish Borderers fought in the most gallant fashion.

THE AUSTRALIANS.

SOME HARD FIGHTING.

Mr. C. E. W. Bean, official correspondent with the A.I.F., telegraphing on Sunday afternoon, stated:—

The weather to-day turned bitterly cold. The condition of shell holes on the battlefield is not very different from those on the Somme in the winter, but we have far more experience. Further details of Thursday's great fight show that the chief resistance was met when the troops reached the top of a ridge, where the Germans held a position in a sunken road, running southward from Broodseinde along a crest. Beside this road was a big crater, probably caused by some bygone explosion of an ammunition dump. Here the Germans had a blockhouse, also a trench running behind a hedge on the far side of the road. Machine guns from the crater began to catch our men immediately they came up the hill within sight of it. Nearly 20 minutes fighting ... waged fiercely before it. Our men, with grenades, gradually worked up to a position from which they could bomb the crater. By this time the flank attack had already gone forward past the road. Our men standing up with their rifles, covered the garrison in the blockhouse, who came running out with their hands up.

But, though the German privates surrendered from the side of the crater, from a small trench behind the road on the other side a small party was still fighting on and would not surrender. It consisted entirely of officers, non-commissioned officers, with one medical private. They fought on with bombs and revolvers, being unable to retreat to the crater, owing to our fire up the road. Finally grenades, falling in the trench, drove them out to the surface, when the captain was bayoneted and the rest killed, wounded, or captured.

There has been a consistent tale from our men of brave fighting by the enemy. One officer told me he saw a machine-gunner who, within 10 yards of him, was bayoneted while his fingers were still pressing the trigger of the machine-gun. Our men simply made straight at him. There was no time nor need for orders. The men made up their minds themselves, and swung straight in, a fair number dropping, but within a few seconds they reached him, killed him, and passed him. Scores of such small fights occurred. The Germans generally gave up when we got within 20 yards of them. Our men were wonderfully cool, coming up to ask officers some questions, speaking naturally and without hurry through the thick barrage. No troops living could have resisted them behind that barrage.

The Germans in the front line, who were waiting to attack, were simply overrun. One German officer was waiting in a dugout for his barrage to open when the thunder of the guns started overhead. He believed it was the German bombardment. A few minutes later he ran up the stairs to see how the attack was progressing and if the supports were moving up. He found three big Victorians just looking down into the trench. He told his captors he could not support the disgrace of capture, as he was to have been promoted captain next day. From a captured order we know that lines of German assault troops, who were waiting on No Man's Land, had not delayed the advance one minute. The orders of those German battalions were: "Units will advance with fixed bayonets, and will assault, loudly shouting 'Hurrah!' Experience has proved that the English have never been able to withstand an attack of that sort."

Another order instructed stretcher-bearers to work under the Red Cross flag, "as the English always respect it."

FOE'S LOSSES.

AT LEAST THREE DIVISIONS.

Mr. Percival Phillips states:—Statements of prisoners and much information obtained from unofficial sources confirm the reported demoralisation of the enemy troops in Thursday's battle. General von Arnim must have lost at least three good infantry divisions, including the Fourth Guards and the 45th Reserve, who were among the best of the German Army Guards. They consisted of thoroughly trained men and the pick of the recruit depots, averaging from 25 to 30 years of age. The 45th Reserve were a storm-troop, chosen for heavy attacks.

The 4th Guards are still suffering from their losses at Lens, where the Canadians systematically shelled and gassed them among the ruined collieries. They only left Lens on September 26, and were promised a rest for a time in Belgium, but Von Arnim thought otherwise. He needed even tired men. Within three days the Guards were under fire at Zonnebeke. They weakened, and grew discontented. Every company of a division except four was represented in the prisoners' camp.

The 20th Division, which recently was on the Russian front, yielded over 1000 prisoners, besides which a large number of dead are still strewn over the battlefield.

There was extraordinary confusion in the German line owing to the promiscuous throwing in of regiments. Many battalions were cut off from their regimental headquarters.

Troops waiting in the darkness in order to pass through the stationary infantry found themselves overwhelmed by the British barrages. Officers completely lost their heads, and ran about cursing their men. Distress signals for artillery were unanswered. Even the German wireless stations were knocked out. The situation east of Polygon Wood was an example of the confusion prevailing on the entire German front. Here three battalions of storm-troops were assembled ready to attack in three waves, with footguards ready to take over the line when captured, and a reserve regiment ready to make a second assault if the first failed. All the detachments were in close formation. Exactly ten minutes before the first German wave was to advance the British were among them. By this time the barrages were sweeping through the reserves behind with terrible effect. Survivors of this defeated mob said the surprise was paralysing, and no soldiers could have rallied.

This third defeat must affect the enemy's plans in many ways. He must dig new winter quarters, rearrange his artillery, and establish fresh railheads, aerodromes, and hutments. The disappointment of the German commanders is great, as they believed we would not attempt large operations after the end of August owing to the difficulty of getting the heavy guns over the marshes.

The Higher Command is offering a tempting reward for every British prisoner. The price varies from 25/ to 50/ for a living man, and for a dead man or identification badges 10/.

The storming of Abraham Heights and Gravenstafel contained much dramatic incident. The New Zealanders were rather handicapped at the beginning by the bulge in their original line. This prevented them starting evenly. In order to remedy this some of the New Zealanders had to fall back and rush forward again when the barrage began, covering a considerable extent of extra ground at a double. Somewhat to the New Zealanders' surprise a group of firm redoubts close to the jumping off places was full of Germans. Otto Farm, only a few yards distant, suddenly came to life and spat bullets from many loopholes until it was stormed. There was a lively fight at Berlin Farm, on the west of Roosbeke-road. The New Zealanders silenced Berlin Farm with Stokes bombs. There was no time to examine the redoubt, but it was broken open next day, and found full of dead Germans. A number of pillboxes were dotted west of Roosbeke-road, above Gravenstafel.

In one case the German gun-crew appeared through the narrow door, carrying the gun and cartridges. They dodged behind tree-trunks, but some New Zealanders—a sergeant and a few men—worked around them. When capture was inevitable the Germans put up their hands. A moment later their hands dropped, and expecting treachery of the usual sort the New Zealanders killed them all.

TURKS TRAPPED.

HOW RAMADI FELL.

Mr. Edmund Candler sends a vivid despatch regarding the Ramadi Battle. Two British columns moved out on the night of September 27 from the advanced camp on the Euphrates, west of Feluja, and attacked the low line of dunes running from the Euphrates to the Habbaniyah Canal. They found the Turks evacuating the dunes, so quickly changed the line of attack. The right column swung round, and became the left wing of the attacking force.

The cavalry meanwhile made a wide-sweeping movement across the desert, round the Turkish right flank. They left the battle area at 8 in the morning, and by 4 in the afternoon the cavalry were established astride the Aleppo-road, completely cornering the Turks, who, without a bridge behind them, were cut off from all hope of reinforcements and supplies. Their only chance was to break through the ever-closing ring.

Meanwhile one column was attacking Ramadi ridge on the right, and the other was working round to Aziziyah ridge on the left. The capture of Ramadi ridge by the British and Indian infantry was a most gallant affair. The low, pebbly rise was barely 1[illegible] feet above the plain, without cover of any kind. The infantry were visible to the Turks 200 yards before they reached the top of the rise. As we came into view the enemy opened a concentrated rifle and machine gun fire. The British and Indians dug in for the night, and so occupied the Turks that the left column was able to work round, and seize Aziziyah ridge with little opposition. By night the infantry were holding the enemy between the two canals, while the cavalry, five miles to the west of Ramadi, had cut off their retreat.

At 3 in the morning the Turks tried to break through between the cavalry and the river. The fight continued for two hours, and daylight showed the Turks' case to be hopeless. A small detachment of Turkish cavalry swam the river, and escaped, with a score of infantrymen, but the main force, with all the guns, was trapped.

The British infantry reattacked at dawn, and against repeated counter-attacks, seized the bridgehead at Aziziyah Canal. An intense bombardment was then opened on the Turkish trenches, but the Turkish guns did not reply. White flags went up all along the line, and Ahmed Bey came out and surrendered his whole force.

THE U-BOATS.

WAR RISKS REDUCED.

It is reported form Washington that the War Insurance Bureau has reduced its rates 23 per cent., the action being based on reports that the U-boats are not largely successful, and that indications point to the fact that new devices will further reduce the ravages of submarines.

A message from Christiania states that the increase in Norway's fleet during September was 12,000 tons, against a loss of 24,000 tons. The total of the fleet to-day is 3265 vessels, aggregating 2,126,000 tons.

INTERNED U-BOAT ESCAPES.

A wireless message from Madrid says that the German submarine which was interned at Cadiz has escaped without munitions. The General-in-Chief of the arsenal and other responsible officials have been dismissed.

SUBMARINE SUNK.

It is officially reported from Washington that American destroyers sank an enemy submarine. The date of the incident is not made known, but it is announced that the engagement was of a thrilling character, lasting twenty minutes. The destroyers crossed in the wake of the submarine five times, on each occasion dropping charges to explode at a certain depth. Four of the explosive charges threw up only clear water, but the fifth sent up a heavy film of oil. The British Admiralty has sent a letter of appreciation to the United States Admiralty.

PERU AND URUGUAY.

BREACH WITH GERMANY.

A Monte Video message states that the Uruguayan Senate passed a resolution in favour of a break with Germany by 13 votes to 3. The voting in the Chamber of Deputies was 74 to 23. The President has issued a decree announcing the rupture, and recalling the Uruguayan Minister for Germany. The Deputies sat till 2 o'clock in the morning. The rupture was greeted with an enthusiastic demonstration by the waiting crowds.

President Viera sent the following message to Parliament:—"The time has come for Uruguay to enrol in the league of honour mentioned by President Wilson. Uruguay has not received direct offence from Germany, but it is necessary to espouse the cause of the defenders of justice, democracy, and small nationalities, and to disregard any material question. The President is authorised to revoke the decree of neutrality whenever necessary."

A report from Lima states that the decision of the Peruvian Congress to break off relations was carried by 105 votes to 6.

MACEDONIA.

A French communique states: Artillery is active on the Vardar front, north of Monastir, and in the region of the lakes.

AIR-RAIDING.

M. Marcel Hutin, the French war critic, says that reliable information is to hand that the enemy is making tremendous efforts to construct more powerful aeroplanes to bomb Entente towns, and also to counter-balance the American aerial contribution.

PEACE MEETING BROKEN UP.

A pacificist meeting, which was arranged for Sunday afternoon in the "Brotherhood Church," North London, resulted in a riot. A large crowd, including soldiers, assembled outside and broke through the police cordon protecting the church. They howled down the chairman, took possession of the building, and sang the National Anthem, and other patriotic songs. Someone started a fire beside the pulpit, intending to burn the church down. The crowd rushed out, crying "Fire." The police extinguished the flames, little damage being done.

MISSION TO SWEDEN.

Baron Akerhielm, Counsellor to the Swedish Legation in Washington, has started for Sweden as a courier. It is believed his mission is most important.

MEMORIAL TO AUSTRALIANS.

The Bishop of Salisbury unveiled an imposing memorial to the men of the First Training Battalion, Australian Forces, erected at Durrington, near Amesbury. It is in the form of a massive obelisk of rugged red granite, 15ft high, and bears the arms of the Commonwealth in bronze.

REBATE FOR MARRIED MEN.

In consequence of the South Wales miners demanding a revision of the income-tax, Mr. Bonar Law is offering an abatement of £25 on account of a wife, thus practically taxing bachelors.

LATE WAR NEWS.

GERMANS BEATEN BACK.

LONDON, Oct. 8.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting at 12.55 p.m. on Monday, stated: We beat off an attack eastward of Polygon Wood, following upon yesterday evening's heavy barrage. We successfully raided eastward of Monchy.

AUSTRALIA AND AMERICA.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.

Mr. H. C. Hoyle, an ex-Minister in the New South Wales Cabinet, who is on a visit to the United States, has made the announcement that Australia is able to assist in the establishing of new American industries, especially the manufacture of dye. He says that she has all those essential minerals with which Germany built up a huge dye trade. He advocates an organisation to promote the mutual interests of the two countries and the provision of better transportation facilities between America and the Commonwealth. These matters, he urges, should not be postponed until after the war.

SOUTH AMERICA.

It is reported from Washington that the decisions of Uruguay and Peru have convinced United States officials that all South and Central America will ultimately take action against Germany. The result of this policy will be the strengthening of the embargo on all goods going to the North European neutrals, and the placing of further German vessels at the disposal of the Allies.

It is reported from Monte Video that a British cruiser held up a Spanish steamer, presumably seeking von Luxburg.

MEXICO.

A report from Mexico City states that it is believed a prominent journalist, M. Palavicini, who is a strong friend of the Allies, will become Foreign Minister. The appointment would have the effect of rapidly changing the present policy.

THE POPE'S EFFORTS.

The Rome correspondent of the "New York Sun" says that the Pope is striving to decrease the bitterness of the war, and is making efforts through the Papal Nuncios of Munich and Vienna to have an end put to the German and Austrian aerial raids over open cities.

DYING KERENSKY.

HOPES FOR RUSSIA.

DEMOCRACY FROM ANARCHY.

LONDON, Oct. 8.

The Russian Embassy in Washington believes the coalition offers every assurance that effective policies will be carried out, embracing M. Kerensky's determined programme for the restoration of the army's fighting power.

M. Kerensky, writing to a friend, says the consumption from which he is suffering is progressing better than the Russian revolution, but he hopes Russia will be liberated before he dies, and develop a real democracy from the present anarchy.

The "Daily Chronicle," summing up the political situation in Russia, says the Democratic Conference has revealed a weakness owing to the great number of delegates. The leaders, therefore, have adopted a scheme for a so-called Preliminary Parliament, which will be a new edition of the Democratic Conference on a manageable scale. Each group will nominate a number of members of the parliament in proportion to its conference strength, the nominees being approved by the conference.

Russia will thus have a permanent session, not of a Parliament in the western sense but of a body which is based on several sections of public opinion.

The Democratic Conference's votes regarding coalition were so contradictory as to constitute a fiasco.

M. Kerensky now is negotiating for a new coalition Cabinet, in which the Moscow manufacturers, the Cadets, and the Bourgeoise will co-operate. M. Tseretelli, who proved the strongest man at the conference, has given provisional sanction to a coalition Cabinet. It is not known what responsibility the Cabinet will have to the Provisional Parliament.

An election proper of a constituent Assembly is the capital need of Russia.

RUSSIAN FIGHTING FRONT.

A Russian official message on Sunday stated:—We captured a height, also half of the village of Vaskoutcy, north-west of the Sereth, and repulsed counter-attacks. Subsequently enemy artillery forced us to abandon the village. We captured 762 prisoners.

A German official message on Sunday stated:—We drove out the enemy from Vaskoutcy, and captured some prisoners.

GERMAN WARSHIP.

DAMAGED BY MINE.

According to an Amsterdam report, a traveller from Hamburg states that at the beginning of last week a new German battle-cruiser, undergoing trials off Heligoland, struck a mine, and was towed to port seriously damaged. Twenty-three of the crew were drowned, including three officers.

NEW COAL FIELD.

Several coal seams have been discovered at Coventry. They are estimated to yield 80 million tons.

AUSTRALIA'S ARMY NURSES.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

Mr. Groom, Assistant Minister for Defence, stated at the annual meeting of the Mothers' Union to-night, that the number of Australian nurses engaged in military service was 2100. Of these 254 were working in Imperial hospitals in India, 364 were at Salonica, also in Imperial hospitals. In similar hospitals in Egypt there were 50 to 60, and in England and France 150 to 200. About 900 were in Australian hospitals in England, France, and Egypt. The remainder were serving on hospital ships, and there were, in addition, about 350 on duty in Australia. To 10 the Royal Red Cross of the first class had been awarded, and to 51 the Cross of the second class.

SMALL ARMS FACTORY.

LITHGOW, Monday.

At the small arms factory the forge and charge department will commence work again to-morrow. They were closed down for some weeks owing to a shortage of oil, but this has now come to hand in satisfactory quantities.

WAR NOTES.

RAIN AND FLANDERS OFFENSIVE.

The enemy's reference to the continuous destructive artillery fire between Poelcapelle and Zandvoorde might suggest that the British pressure in Flanders will be again applied before very long. At the same time, however, the many references to the state of the weather cannot be ignored. Both Sir Douglas Haig's reports and the messages of the correspondents make special reference to the heavy rain and the stormy winter conditions at present prevailing. In spite of all the improved methods which are now adopted in Flanders, it must be recognised that the weather conditions will still have a marked effect upon the British offensive operations. The big lull between the British attack in Flanders on July 31 last and the push of September 20 was due mainly to the heavy rains, and it gave the enemy an opportunity to prepare his new front and thoroughly test his latest defensive methods. Another lengthy spell of bad weather may, therefore, be expected to have its effect upon the British operations. The condition of the ground over which the British troops have advanced in their recent successive attacks can be imagined. The amount of work necessary to reconstruct communications through the shell-scarred area is heavy enough when carried out under favourable conditions, but the task becomes almost impossible after heavy rainfall, when the innumerable shell holes fill with water, and the Flanders country becomes converted into a sea of mud. Without suitable means for communicating with the front line the organisation necessary for the renewal of the offensive must suffer. Fortunately the British appear to have had time to establish something like order on their new front, and to complete the work of consolidating their positions before the rain commenced seriously to interfere with their work. Even so, however, their position must be far from comfortable, and, unless the weather shows a marked improvement, it will be well not to expect too much in the way of further extensive advances at present.

THE UNHEALTHY LENS SALIENT.

It has been rumoured so often that the enemy is about to evacuate Lens that it will not be unnatural if the latest announcement to this effect by the "New York Times" is received with some scepticism. The paper asserts that Hindenburg will take this step shortly, and suggests that it has been forced upon him as a result of the British victories in Flanders. While a withdrawal from the narrow and costly salient in this ruined town might be advisable, such a decision on the enemy's part would be due more to the position into which Sir Douglas Haig's encircling move earlier in the year forced him than to the recent British successes in Flanders. Unless the enemy decided to withdraw from the whole La Bassee salient between Lens and the Ypres front, it would be difficult to see how the successes so far secured in Flanders could affect the strategical importance of Lens. The Flanders offensive is gradually lengthening the northern side of the La Bassee salient, and if that salient is not to become more pronounced it is necessary for the enemy to hold his ground as much as possible on the southern side of it between Lens and the Scarpe. If he deems it advisable to evacuate Lens before the winter it will be because of the drain on his troops which its retention entails. Sir Douglas Haig could no doubt complete the capture of the place without great delay if its possession was necessary for the success of his strategical plan. The British now look down upon the town from three sides, and their possession of practically all the useful high ground in the vicinity of it enables them to inflict severe punishment upon the troops compelled to remain in this most unhealthy little salient. Sir Douglas Haig is probably prepared to allow the enemy to remain in this unenviable position throughout the winter if he chooses to do so. If Hindenburg decides otherwise it will be because the British encircling movement at Lens made the enemy's position there intolerable. In any case Lens is a ripe plum which may be picked almost at any time.

GERMAN INFLUENCE IN SPAIN.

The escape from Cadiz of an interned German submarine is another glaring instance of the sinister German influences which are at work in Spain. The submarine in question, which was said to be the U293, was escorted into Cadiz on September 11 last by a Spanish torpedo boat, the captain stating that he had put in for oil. The Spanish authorities, however, announced that the submarine had been damaged, and would be interned. This was clearly the only action which could be taken in the circumstances, and the fact that the vessel has been permitted to shelter in Cadiz for the greater part of a month, effect her necessary repairs, and make good her escape, reveals gross neglect or direct connivance on the part of the Spanish authorities. The Allies will hardly be satisfied with the announcement that a few officials have been dismissed in connection with the affair. One might have expected Spain to have made doubly sure of the detention of any German submarine which fell into her hands, in view of the many outrages which German underwater craft have perpetrated against her mercantile marine. Apparently she soon forgets such incidents as the attack upon a Spanish fishing boat off Bilbao in August last, when a German submarine commander sank the vessel and severely injured several members of the crew. The German money and German sympathy which made it possible for this submarine to escape and renew its attacks upon Spanish merchant vessels may have been confined to the officials who have been dismissed. The incident, however, is by no means consistent with an attitude of impartial neutrality, and it is not the first time that Germany has been permitted to make use of Spanish waters in order to serve her own purposes at the expense of the Allies.

BOMBING SUBMERGED SUBMARINES.

A message from New York announces that the British Admiralty has sent a letter of appreciation to the United States Admiralty in connection with the sinking of an enemy submarine by American destroyers. The destroyers in question are said to have dropped explosive charges timed to explode at a certain depth, and that the fifth charge sent up a heavy film of oil, indicating that the submarine had been sunk. This method of bombing submarines when submerged is, of course, an old one, and there does not seem to be any reason why the British Admiralty should make more of this particular sinking than of any other success achieved by the destroyers from across the Atlantic. The efficacy of these "water bombs," however, has been questioned by the enemy on several occasions, and a German newspaper recently stated that they seldom succeeded. Mr. Thomas G. Frothingham, in the course of an article, the material of which was said to have been supplied by an American scientist, supported this enemy contention by stating that the British navy had used bombs which "did no damage unless they were practically in contact with the U-boats," and added that "cases are known of escapes when the bomb exploded within four feet of the craft attacked." In the same article it is stated that "the United States navy is known to have developed an improved high explosive bomb for use against the U-boat. . . . In the improved American bombs the delayed explosion below the surface is so powerful that it will seriously injure the hull of a U-boat 25ft or 30ft away." In spite of what has been said regarding the British bombs, however, the navy appears to be satisfied regarding their efficiency, and the last batch of authoritative instances of successful encounters with enemy submarines, which was published at the beginning of the present month, included two in which "water bombs" had been used with results concerning the effective nature of which there could be little or no doubt.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

The sittings of the Royal Commission (Mr. G. M. Allard) inquiring into the Public Service will be resumed in the Education-building at 2.15 p.m. to-day.

STRIKE ENDING.

THE COAL MINES.

ALL TO RESUME.

MESSAGE TO ACTING-PREMIER.

Yesterday afternoon the Acting Premier (Mr. Fuller) received from Newcastle the following telegram, signed by Mr. Baddeley, president of the Coal and Shale Employees' Federation:—"As far as the federation is concerned, members of the association are prepared to start work to-morrow (Tuesday) morning in all collieries."

"This is very satisfactory indeed," said Mr. Fuller. "Naturally, the receipt of this news gives me great pleasure."

"BEATEN."

MR. BADDELEY'S STATEMENT.

KURRI KURRI, Monday.

Richmond Main colliery is now full-handed. Old hands on applying for reinstatement were told there was no work for them. The output is now averaging 500 tons daily. The men held a meeting on Saturday and decided to form a union embracing every man employed in and about the colliery.

A mass meeting of miners was held on Sunday, which was addressed by Messrs. Baddeley and Willis. It was very orderly, except towards the end, when the lodge officials on the balcony hurled charges at each other. Mr. Baddeley made a statement that the men were beaten, and their only chance was to get back as soon as possible. Victimisation could be dealt with afterwards. Mr. Willis spoke strongly, and in the same strain. The men returned to their homes quietly.

SOUTH COAST.

PROMINENT OFFICIALS PUT OFF.

BULLI, Monday.

All the mines on the South Coast, with the exception of Scarborough Tunnel, where a break-down in the machinery has stopped work for a day or two, were at work to-day. The activity displayed in and about the collieries and the fully loaded coal trains passing on their way to the seaboard made one of the most welcome sights for a considerable time. It is estimated that about 7000 tons will be turned out for the day, and well on to 40,000 tons for the week.

The question of the non-employment of some of the strikers is keenly felt by those affected on the South Coast. Up to Saturday many looked upon the situation with a certain degree of optimism, as it was thought that, by adopting a conciliatory attitude towards the Government, the majority of the men now out of employment would have been reinstated when matters smoothed down. However, the position, unfortunately, has been aggravated by the receipt this morning of a further batch of 20 names of men who were not in future to be employed. This brings the total up to 126. Included in the additional list were Messrs. D. Dunkombe and G. Phillips, southern representatives on the Coal Federation Council.

Miners were at a loss to understand the attitude adopted by the managers in putting out prominent officials connected with the Miners' Association. It was pointed out that the most hurtful part was the fact that a number of those who were told that their services would no longer be required had never taken an active part in union matters. Although it was admitted there were extremists in the district, some of those affected had in every way proved themselves good citizens. Many of those affected hoped, when the position was considered on representations placed before the Cabinet by the Coal Federation Council, that what appeared to be a most discouraging state of affairs woud be righted and a better spirit created as regarded all concerned.

The militant spirit displayed by the Maitland miners is not taken seriously on the Coast. It is pointed out that in the existing conditions the Maitland and Newcastle miners comprise one branch. This has led to considerable dissatisfaction amongst a section. It is considered that more amicable relations would be brought about by the establishment of a branch at Maitland, similar to that on the South Coast. The lack of loyalty shown to the coal federation officials is resented, and it is attributed to local grievances rather than to any objection to the federation's action in the strike.

SOUTH MAITLAND FIELD.

MEN GETTING TO WORK.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

KURRI, KURRI, Monday.

All the South Maitland collieries are preparing to reopen. At the majority of the collieries the men were in attendance signing on or drawing their cavils, that is, pairing off with mates, for their working places for the quarter. There is no doubt that, after two months of idleness, the men are eager to get back to work, and go on the pay list once more. That much was evident at Pelaw Main, the big colliery near Kurri Kurri, to-day. The men held a meeting at 2 o'clock, and it took them no time to determine what they would do. No sooner had the meeting ended than there was a general exodus towards the colliery office, and those who had taken a prominent part in the strike were not amongst the last to join in the pilgrimage. This colliery employs something like 700 or 800 men when working in full swing, and before last March, when the second shift was worked, the output rose to 3500 tons a day, the average being 3000 tons daily.

The system of re-employment at Pelaw Main is interesting. The procedure was to call out the names of the men required by the management, only such a number as are required to make up the complement. It is expected that about 200 of the men formerly employed will not be required for the present. The management indicates further that it will only be possible to employ the number who signed on this afternoon in the event of the men being willing to work two shifts, in view of the great demand for coal and the need for employing as many of them as possible. This colliery, in common with other collieries of the district, has only been working one shift since March last. The management expects if two shifts are worked to get out 3000 tons a day in a short time at least.

One or two prominent lodge officials are not expected to work in this colliery again, and it now remains to be seen what the men of the lodge have to say about working two shifts. The position which has arisen is, therefore, decidedly interesting.

Richmond Main, the neighbouring colliery, is being worked with three shifts. A consolidated system is being used throughout. It is stated that the huts formerly used at Rutherford Training Camp are to be erected near the colliery. The output will rise to 400 tons a day within a short time.

Rothbury colliery, near Branxton, has, it is reported, resumed work to-day with two shifts.

At Hebburn colliery to-day the miners drew the cavil, and work will commence to-morrow. There were only about five men not re-employed, and at the Stanford Merthyr there are believed to be about 22 who will not be allowed to sign on.

WESTERN DISTRICT.

POSITION OF VOLUNTEERS.

LITHGOW, Monday.

As far as the western collieries are concerned, matters are adjusting themselves satisfactorily in regard to the re-employment of the men, though there are some exceptions. Volunteer workers are leaving to take up their previous duties, and practically all of them have left the Lithgow colliery, where at a meeting a resolution was moved that the way be made clear, so far as they were concerned, for the resumption of work by the old hands. Twenty more unionists were re-engaged this morning, and it is said that there will be no question of victimisation. Hermitage colliery has also resumed work; and, except that a few shift men have not yet started at Oakey Park, all but 18 voluntary workers on the coal, and a few on the surface, have left. There were some re-engagements of old hands this morning. At the Invincible colliery, Cullen Bullen, 100 volunteer workers remain, thus displacing a similar number of old hands.

Collieries at which general resumption has been made include Cobar Main Range and Boldon. Zig Zag is not yet in full working, and about 20 men are still standing off, owing to the workings not being in order. At the Tyldesley colliery, (late Great Western), which employs from 35 to 40 hands, the manager is alleged to have refused the miners' check weighmen the right to go on the bridge, while some miners and wheelers are also reported to have been refused work. The Miners' Federation is taking up the matter.

TRANSPORT WORKERS.

CONCLUSION OF STRIKE.

COAL-LUMPERS RESUME.

Members of the unions affiliated with the Transport Workers' Federation presented themselves for work yesterday morning. There was general activity on the waterfront, but it will be some days before things will be normal. The members of the Federated Firemen and Seamen's Union, who have been on strike for about two months, decided on Saturday to resume duty, and already a number of vessels have got away.

The Sydney Coal-Lumpers' Union held a meeting yesterday morning, when it was decided to fall into line with the other unions in the transport group and resume work. A couple of gangs have started coaling operations right away on pre-strike conditions," said an official of the union when seen yesterday afternoon. "During the past eight or nine weeks our members have been idle on account of there being no coal forthcoming. We claim that we have not been on strike."

"A large number of our men have already joined their ships," said an official of the Seamen's Union when interviewed. He added that as ample coal became available, and industry grew to be normal, the whole of the members of the organisation would be absorbed.

Many of the wharf-labourers who registered for employment at the Permanent Wharf-Labourers' Bureau commenced work yesterday. The Port Jackson Stevedoring Company are still enrolling wharf-labourers, and on inquiries being made at the Sussex-street bureau yesterday it was stated that everything was progressing satisfactorily, and first-class men were offering their services. The shipping companies are busy getting the steamers into commission, but there will undoubtedly be some delay until the coal trade is in full swing.

A mass meeting of the Wharf-Labourers' Union will be held in the Town Hall this afternoon, when the position which has been brought about by the strike will be discussed.

DISAPPOINTED MEN.

CATHERINE HILL BAY, Monday.

Since the strike was declared off, and application for work were signed, a very small percentage has been taken on, and keen disappointment is felt by the men. The oldest employees thought that they would be the first to be reinstated; but the method of selection does not follow any prescribed rule, and much resentment is felt. The miners who have been reinstated have received instructions to treat the loyalists with courtesy, and have been told that no disparaging remarks will be tolerated. The majority of them are working in a section of the colliery some distance from the loyalists.

WHARF-LABOURERS.

In a statement last night the president of the Wharf Labourers' Union, Mr. M'Cristal, said he was keenly disappointed with the hostile attitude which the shipping companies had adopted towards the wharf labourers, who, upon presenting themselves again that morning, were informed that they must present themselves through the bureau and sign the cards. "This," he added, "our men absolutely refuse to do, and if there is a further prolongation of the trouble as a result of a card, which bears most humiliating conditions, then the blame will not attach to the members of my union. Although anxious to work, the men are not anxious to sign away their honour with it. Among other things on the card is a statutory declaration under which a man must swear that he is not a member of the Waterside Workers' Federation of Australia or of any branch of it. This clearly proves that these people are intent upon smashing this organisation—a course which is illegal, and contrary to Mr. Justice Higgins's award. Again, in connection with permanent employment, men have sent to them cards which offer them only casual work, pending inquiry into their characters, etc. This, however, is apart from the members of my organisation. The action of the shipping companies to-day does not tend towards a complete settlement. The seamen here, although prepared to go on the boats, are becoming anxious lest they be asked to go to sea with cargo handled by non-unionists. In the interests of industrial peace I trust that our men, in common with others, will be allowed an opportunity to pursue their old calling."

THE MEAT INDUSTRY.

Mr. C. H. Anderson, secretary to the Federal Council of the Meat Industry Employees' Union, said yesterday that there were no developments to report in connection with the trouble in the meat industry. Negotiations were still in progress, and he would not return to Victoria until a satisfactory settlement in this State had been reached.

GENERAL LABOURERS.

Mr. Bodkin, secretary of the Railway Workers and General Labourers' branch of the A.W.U., said yesterday that over 100 men had attended his office during the day making inquiries in regard to work. Many inquiries were made with reference to wheat-loading at White Bay. His union had no desire to interfere with the wharf-labourers in their efforts to maintain pre-strike conditions.

COAL-SHOVELLERS WANTED.

Additional coal-shovellers are wanted to discharge the State-manned colliers, and it has been decided to give preference of selection to the loyal volunteers who have returned from the coal mines at which the strikers have resumed work.

From 30 to 40 men are required immediately. They will go into the Coaling Battalion Camp at Dawes Point, and will be paid award rates. Volunteers who have returned from any of the coal mines worked by the Government during the strike should apply at 10 o'clock this morning for selection at the National Service Bureau, 25 O'Connell-street, city.

MORE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Yesterday the Electric Light and Power Board met at the Town Hall. At the conclusion of the meeting the Town Clerk, Mr. Nesbitt, announced that the restrictions in regard to electric lighting had been removed, with the exception of external lights. It was also decided by the board to withdraw the restrictions in regard to irons and general heating, with the exception of steel furnaces, which are allowed one heating every 24 hours.

VOLUNTARY WORKERS.

At the last meeting of the executive council of the Farmers and Settlers' Association, Mr. W. E. Wearne, M.L.A., moved,—"That this executive place on record its high appreciation of the great work performed by the president, Mr. A. K. Trethowan, M.L.C., as chairman of the board appointed to control the voluntary workers during the recent industrial crisis; his whole-hearted, unselfish, and most capable management having earned the respect and admiration of all who have had opportunity of being associated with the work." Mr. Cartwright seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

A letter was received from the Molong branch of the association, suggesting, that in view of the industrial trouble, the executive have a register prepared of names of members who would be available for work in the event of further industrial trouble in the future.

The president (Mr. Trethowan) said it would not be advisable to take action as suggested. The register of names of all voluntary workers had been kept, and these would be retained as a record. The existing machinery of the association had enabled a most effective response, and if further necessity should arise the experience now gained would enable the association to be even more effective.

MORE TROUBLE AT BROKEN HILL.

BROKEN HILL, Monday.

A large number of men, members of the A.M.A., following upon the resolutions passed by the A.M.A. on Saturday and Sunday, declaring the strike off, registered and signed on at the various mines this morning. The registration was fairly steady from about 10 o'clock.

Mr. E. J. Horwood, president of the Mining Manager's Association, speaking regarding this registration, said that this was all the mines were doing for the moment. The date of resumption of work depended on the coal supplies, and on the advice from the representatives of the Barrier mines in Melbourne when the coal supplies would be sufficient. He could say that up to 3 o'clock this afternoon a total of 2531 men had signed on at the various mines. This is in addition to the 2500 surface workers who recently registered.

A mass meeting of unionists, under the aussions of the Trades and Labour Council, was held this morning at the Trades Hall, when further explanations were given as to why the council had declared the strike off. Several days ago a number of members of the A.M.A. were present, and one asked if members of the Trades and Labour Council would give an undertaking that they would not take the jobs of A.M.A. men along the line of lode. This assurance was not forthcoming. Members of the Trades and Labour Council said that the A.M.A. was after the jobs of all unionists in the City Council, yet they wanted members of the council to undertake not to apply for A.M.A. jobs on the mines. The matter was not equitable.

The debate was growing heated, when the chairman adjourned the meeting.

Another dispute occurred to-day among the A.M.A. employees of the City Council. Some men who set to work to carry out the asphalting in the Central Reserve refused to work with a member of the Trades and Labour Union. This man had been employed by the City Council for 17 years. All the A.M.A. men engaged in parks and on road work, about 30 in all, then downed tools. It was stated that if the trouble was not settled to-day the council's sanitary men, who mainly belong to the A.M.A., may also join in the strike.

IN VICTORIA.

RUSH FOR RE-EMPLOYMENT.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

Strikers were to-day busy making application for re-employment. A number of men began work at the timber yards, and more will be put on to-morrow, when teams of horses will be ready for the carters. Carpenters and joiners again offered themselves, and many were given work.

As was to be expected, the cry of "victimisation" has been raised by some timber workers who were not successful in immediately securing their former positions. It was suggested that the matter should be referred to the Union Defence Committee, but among unionists generally the allegation is not likely to be regarded seriously. Until coal is available and trade is restored to its customary activity the timber merchants cannot put their businesses into full operation, with the result that a number of strikers will have to remain idle until that time.

Members of the Rubber Workers' Union also filled applications with the Dunlop Rubber Company. None of them will be put on this week, but it is expected that between 300 and 400 will begin work next week.

The Carters and Drivers' Union is endeavouring to arrange for the employment of men out of work. Owing to the scarcity of coal the staffs at the boot factories have been reduced, and when the power was made available to-day 800 members of the Bootmakers' Union were among the unemployed.

Members of the Wharf Labourers' Union, who are still on strike, held a meeting at the Guild Hall this afternoon, when a recommendation was submitted that they should register for re-employment. The proposal, however, was warmly opposed, and it was decided to continue the strike until more favourable terms could be secured from the shipowners. A large number of men favoured presenting themselves for work at once, but the militant section triumphed by prophesying that if this were agreed to half of the strikers would lose their jobs.

Over 400 men enrolled to-day at the National Service Bureau.

A meeting of members of the Victorian branch of the Federated Seamen's Union, after sitting for nearly three hours to-night, agreed to a motion for the resumption of work to-morrow.

RECRUITING.

A LETTER FROM FRANCE.

The official recruiting figures for the week ended October 6 show that in New South Wales there were 497 volunteers, of whom 242 were accepted. The principal figures in regard to accepted men are: East Sydney 31, South Sydney 20, West Sydney 15, Newcastle 13, Illawarra 13, Dalley 12, Riverina 11, Werriwa 11, Eden-Monaro 10.

In a letter from France Corporal Clarence Bellingham, of Darlinghurst, writes:—"Australia would soon realise that there is a great war on if she had hostile aeroplanes over her cities, killing and maiming people by the hundreds, and only a limited amount of food. What makes me write like this is that I have been reading in an Australian paper of a hundred odd thousand men between the ages of 18 and 44 who have not yet enlisted."

SPORTSMEN'S UNIT.

The names of over 20 returned soldiers and rejected volunteers have been received by the Sportsmen's Recruiting Committee, in response to their appeal for speakers at the recruiting rallies to be held in the future. The using of ladies in the scheme of organisation for a further 1000 sportsmen-soldiers has been approved by the State Recruiting Committee, and the scheme will be launched very shortly.

MEETINGS.

Sergt. O'Sullivan, Q.M.S. Laseron, and Corporal M'Namara will be the speakers in Martin-place at 1 p.m. to-morrow.

The meetings which have been arranged for to-day are:—Langdon and Langdon, Annandale, 1.45 p.m., Miss Grace Scobie, Lieut. Litchfield, Q.M.S. Judge; David Jones', Goodlet-street, Redfern, 12.45 p.m., Mrs. Clarence Linden, Corporal M'Namara; Darling Harbour Railway Sheds, 12 noon, appeal on behalf of the Railway and Tramways Infantry Reinforcements' Unit.

IN OTHER STATES.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

At the Town Hall to-day 42 men were examined, and 19 passed.

COLLISION IN THE HARBOUR.

FERRY STEAMER AND COLLIER.

A collision occurred in the harbour off Dawes Point, and near the vehicular ferry landing, last night, between the Sydney Ferries Company's steamer Kurraba and the collier Helen Nicoll.

The Kurraba was on the 6.30 p.m. trip from Lavender Bay to the Quay, and had just cleared the M'Mahon's Point wharf, when the Helen Nicoll, which was inward bound to the Bathurst-street wharf with a full cargo of coal, crashed into her, striking a few feet from the stern. The port bulwark of the Kurraba and portion of the deck and fittings were carried away, and she was swung almost round.

There were a number of passengers on the Kurraba at the time, and considerable alarm was caused, but this quickly subsided. The Kurraba was able to get alongside the wharf at the Quay, and after discharging her passengers proceeded to the company's works for repairs. The Helen Nicoll received practically no damage, and, after seeing that the Kurraba was all right, continued her voyage to the Bathurst-street wharf.

TRIP TO AMERICA.

MR. HALL AND MR. VAUGHAN.

It is understood that the State Attorney-General (Mr. D. R. Hall) and the ex-Premier of South Australia (Mr. Crawford Vaughan) will leave for a brief trip to the United States at the end of December.

Mr. Hall stated last night that the National Safety Committee, through Mr. Holman, had invited Mr. Vaughan and himself to visit America to place their services at the disposal of the committee for a few weeks. They have not yet finally notified their acceptance.

Pro-Germans in America are making every effort to cause trouble, particularly in industrial centres. The National Safety Committee has started a campaign with the object of doing everything possible to help the Allies to win the war. Mr. Hall and Mr. Vaughan have been asked to assist.

STATE CABINET.

State Ministers sat in Cabinet yesterday morning. Subsequently the Acting Premier (Mr. Fuller) stated that Ministers considered the question of appointing a tribunal, as promised, in connection with the settlement of the industrial trouble, but no decision was arrived at.

In reply to a question, Mr. Fuller said he had not received Judge Hamilton's report on the charges made by Mr. Price, M.L.A., against the Minister for Lands (Mr. Ashford).

DEATH OF MRS. HIGGINS.

Mrs. Anne Higgins, mother of Mr. Justice Higgins, died at her residence, Malvern, last night. The deceased lady, who was the widow of the Rev. John Higgins, was in her 93rd year.

TYPHOON IN JAPAN.

TREMENDOUS DAMAGE.

TOKIO, Oct. 8.

The typhoon caused damage estimated at a million sterling in Tokio alone, including 203 boats sunk and 1246 houses destroyed.

The dead throughout the country number at least 1000, including 300 who were drowned by the submerging of a small island. Tens of thousands of houses were overwhelmed.

IMPOSTOR'S CAREER.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

Paul Loubet, whose dead body was recently discovered in a Melbourne park, was known in England. By means of false diplomas he acted as locum tenens in a number of English towns, and obtained a lieutenancy in the Army Medical Corps. He acted as medical officer in various units until found out. He was then court-martialled and cashiered, and sent to France in 1915, where he joined the army, but was discharged as undesirable. Then he went to Melbourne.

[Loubet committed suicide by poisoning on September 27, and at the inquest the reason for the suicide was revealed in the evidence of Detective F. J. Piggott, who was instructed by the Melbourne University authorities to inquire into the credentials of Loubet. The witness stated that Loubet had secured the appointments of assistant surgeon to the out-patients' department of the Children's Hospital and assistant surgeon to the Melbourne Hospital, although not a registered medical practitioner. He had also presented himself to the university authorities for admission to the degree of M.D., tendering to the registrar a paper purporting to be a diploma of M.D., Paris. When questioned by Detective Piggott, Loubet admitted that that paper was a forgery. Loubet saw service in France in the present war, but got into disgrace and was dismissed from the ranks. When he came to Australia he posed as an ex-captain of the French army, on whom had been conferred the Legion of Honour. On the strength of his forged credentials Loubet obtained the position of Government medical officer in Papua. His intemperate habits and general misconduct ultimately led to his dismissal, and he left Papua, accompanied by a companion, who was understood to be his wife. After visits to South Australia and Queensland, where he unsuccessfully endeavoured to secure registration as a medical practitioner, Loubet went to New South Wales. Finally he came to Victoria, and in July last he married the daughter of a well-known citizen.]

CHILD'S BODY FOUND.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH MURDER.

A gruesome discovery was made by Mr. Dudley Henry in his home at Parramatta-road, Leichhardt, yesterday, when he discovered the decomposed body of a child, partly burnt, lying in a hamper. He summoned the police, and the child was identified as Cecil Carter, aged 2.

The body was removed to the morgue, and a post mortem examination made by Doctors Palmer and Sheldon. The right hand and the front of the right knee were charred and burnt, but the doctors considered that these injuries were received after death. The body bore no marks of violence which would indicate the cause of death, and the organs were reserved for analysis by the Government Analyst.

Subsequently the police arrested a woman named Vera Kathleen Learch, aged 20. She was brought before the Newtown Police Court and charged with the murder of the child. A remand until to-morrow was applied for by the police and granted.

MURRAY FLOODS.

HIGHEST FOR FORTY YEARS.

ALBURY, Monday.

The flood in the Murray at Albury reached 15ft 7in above summer level late last night. This is the greatest height registered for 40 years. At 9 o'clock this morning the waters had receded two inches, and there has been a further slight fall during the day. Considerable damage has been done to fencing and gardens, and the flood entered a number of houses in South Albury. Some occupiers were compelled temporarily to abandon their homes. Stations up stream report that the flood waters have receded slightly.

THE MURRUMBIDGEE.

WAGGA, Monday.

The Murrumbidgee River reached a maximum height of 27 feet 10 inches at noon to-day, and remained stationary this afternoon. Flood-waters inundated houses in low-lying portions of the outskirts of the town, and covered the flats for many miles each side of the town. Settlers had plenty of warning, and removed the stock to higher levels. No losses occurred. The Tarcutta and Kyeamba creeks reached the highest levels ever recorded, and washed away many miles of wire-netted fencing, but are now subsiding. Reports from up-stream state that the Murrumbidgee River is now falling.

"NO DAY FOR JACK."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I was delighted to see the letters in the "Herald" last week, followed by your leader, on the above subject, as the claims of our Jack Tars have been too long neglected, and I am hopeful that the correspondence will result in action being taken to remedy the injustice. Appreciation of the navy is great throughout the Empire, and Britons thrill with gratitude and pride when they realise what it has achieved during the last three strenuous years. But more than this is needed—a public recognition should be made without any delay, and that in the form of a navy day, and so a tangible proof would be given of the great regard in which our sailors are held.

If such a day is initiated here probably the movement would spread, and so all over the Empire our example here would be followed, resulting in a still richer tribute from our world-wide resources being offered to our ceaseless watchers on the deep. The success of a "day for Jack" would be certain, and would serve to hearten our lads in blue in the completion of their task, which, up to the present, they have carried out with all the ability, courage, and faithfulness so characteristic of the true "Nelson touch."

I am, etc.,

MOTHER OF TWO SOLDIERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I see Mr. Milson is writing to remind me of the Christmas Comforts Fund for the men of the fleet. I am quite aware of this fund, which I believe was started in the first year of the war by the late Mr. Shearston, and gentlemen interested in the welfare of the bluejacket, and I am afraid if it was not for these gentlemen thinking of Jack the public would not have thought of him. Even now I am sure the general public does not know such a fund exists. And again it is only once a year. What is done for Jack during the rest of the year? Is there a comfort fund existing other than the Christmas Comfort Fund? I quite understand the conditions of the two services, and the hardships and privations of our brave soldiers. Still Jack should be recognised a little, specially after three years in the North Sea. I trust Mr. Milson's fund will go on growing, for Jack, in my humble opinion, deserves all he gets, for did he not protect our gallant soldiers on their way "across the seas?"

I am, etc.,

FINANCIAL.

SILVER.

DECREASED PRODUCTION DURING WAR.

When the war broke out silver was worth 1/11¼. To-day it is worth 3/10½ per oz standard. The recent changes in the world's demand for silver and consequent advance in price are of special interest to Australia, which is one of the world's greatest producers. Prior to 1914, Mexico produced more silver than did the United States, but at present the latter country's production of the white metal is double that of Mexico, and much greater than that of any other country. A compilation by the National City Bank of New York shows that the silver production of the United States is now double that of Mexico and three times that of Canada, which holds third rank among the silver producing countries of the world. Of the 172,383,000oz. of silver produced in the world in 1916, the United States produced 72,833,000oz., or 42 per cent. of the world's total, while 20 years ago, in 1896, America produced but 27 per cent. of the world production, which in that year was 157,061,000oz. In that 20-year period, 1896 to 1916, the production of the United States has increased about 14,000,000oz., while that of other parts of the world has increased but about 1,000,000oz. The world's chief producers of silver are the United States, Mexico, Canada, Peru, Japan, Spain, Australia, and Chile, in the order named, the United States having produced in 1915, for which figures of all countries are available, 74,961,000oz., Mexico 39,570,000, Canada 28,401,000, Peru 9,420,000, Japan 5,080,000, Spain 4,565,000, Australia 3,227,000; world total 179,574,000. In 1916, for which returns are not yet available for many of the smaller countries, the production of the United States was 72,884,000oz., Mexico 35,000,000, Canada 25,500,000, and the world's total 172,384,000oz.

DISTRIBUTION AND PRODUCTION OF SILVER.

In the distribution of surplus silver a very large proportion goes to Europe, the remainder chiefly to the Orient. World production of silver has materially declined since the beginning of the war. The total output in 1913, the year immediately preceding the war, was 223,900,000oz, but dropped to 160,626,000 in 1914, 179,574,000 in 1915, and 172,384,000 in 1916, the decline occurring in countries other than the United States, whose production has been in 1913 66,802,000oz, in 1914 72,455,000, in 1915 74,961,000, and in 1916 72,884,000oz. Nearly one-half of the world's production of silver prior to the war was used in the arts and industries, the Director of the American Mint having estimated the consumption for arts and industries in 1912 97,000,000oz out of a total production in that year of 224,000,000oz. At present, according to current reports, the countries at war are increasing materially their coinage of silver, partly to take the place of gold being withdrawn from circulation for other purposes, and in part to accompany the issues of non-metallic currency which have been made necessary by the demands of the war. Meantime, however, the demands of the Orient are also apparently increasing.

THE LIBERTY LOAN.

With regard to a letter signed "Subscriber," which appeared in this column on Saturday, pointing out that the closing date of the new loan coincides with the last day for payment of last instalment of the previous loan, and the inconvenience thereby entailed in subscribers desirous of taking up the new loan, the Commonwealth Bank suggests that if "Subscriber" will apply to his bank for accommodation to enable him to pay the first instalment of the new loan, it will no doubt be readily granted.

SOLOMON ISLANDS RUBBER PLANTATIONS.

The seventh annual report of the above company shows that the amount of capital expenditure added to the plantation account during the year ended July 31 was £959. Contributing shares are now called up to 18/9. One thousand acres have now been planted. The yield of copra was 117,370lb, and the gross proceeds amounted to £1380. There are now 50,393 trees, of which 6600 are in full bearing, and 3025 in the early stages of bearing. On 112 acres there have been planted 12,543 rubber trees.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Mr. W. H. Hall was elected a member of the Sydney Stock Exchange yesterday.

The following resolution was carried at yesterday's meeting of the N.S.W. Watchmakers and Jewellers' Association:—"That in view of the urgent necessity for public economy this association request Mr. R. B. Orchard, M.P., to forcibly point out to the Federal Parliament the tremendous amount of money which would be saved by collecting and controlling the land and income taxes of Australia from one central office, instead of seven."

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

A better business was done in cornsacks yesterday, the importers showing a disposition to sell larger quantities. The price was steady at the proclaimed rate of 59/6. Woolpacks were worth 4/, and branbags 8/6, both for spot lots. Word has been received from Calcutta that revised clauses No. 1 and 1A of the Australian jute goods contract dealing with loss of goods while in transit from mill to export steamer will take effect from January 1, 1918, having been agreed to by the Calcutta trade. The revised clause 1 sets out that delays caused by fire or accident to the machinery of the manufacturing mill, or strike or pestilence among the workmen thereat, or employees thereof, during the currency of the contract, where (whether the mill's name has been declared by shippers to buyers or not), it can be established that the order for manufacture has been placed by the shippers with the mill in question, or delays outside the port limits due to any cause whatever beyond the shipper's control, where it can be established that the goods so delayed had been definitely earmarked for shipment in fulfilment or part fulfilment of the contract (whether mill's name has been declared by shippers to buyers or not), are to be excepted. Notice has to be sent by cable to buyers who have the option of refusing if after time, without any right to claim, the option of refusal to be declared within three clear working days after receipt of such notification. Clause 1A sets forth that in the event of loss and/or damage inside the port limits to goods or parts of goods, the shipper shall not be liable to replace the goods lost and/or damaged. Of course insurances operate.

Metal goods were steady yesterday. A fair business was done in wires, considering the prices—£50 for No. 8 black, £52 for No. 8 galvanised. Barbed wire was up to £50. Black sheets were worth £65. The order as to the declaration of stocks is not troubling holders here to any extent, as stocks are extremely light. It is believed that the order is preparatory to a fixed price being made. There was a somewhat better demand for wire nails at 25 per cent. on list. Rabbit traps had no business, the season being at an end. Some sales of Australian cement were made at 14/6 for three bag lots.

The linseed oil market was rather disorganised. The manufacturers were delivering the full amount of the contracts, and some merchants who had bought on the market were finding their stocks uncomfortably large. Prices had consequently been reduced to the neighbourhood of those determined by the manufacturers. Australian raw was quoted at 6/4, and boiled at 6/6 in quantities to 100 gallons in cases. Another crushing plant has started operations. Imported linseed is worth 8/2. Champions whitelead sold yesterday at £90, and American at £83. Parcels of turpentine were quoted at 4/10, and distributing lots at 5/1. No cod oil was discoverable on the market. Australian pitch had advanced to 17/. Neatsfoot oil, pure had sales at 5/9.

SOLDIERS' BADGES.

At yesterday's meeting of the N.S.W. Watchmakers and Jewellers' Association a resolution was carried protesting against the prohibition which has been placed on the sale of soldiers' badges. The members of the association contend that the patriotic spirit should be encouraged, and they point out that in Great Britain, Canada, and New Zealand there is a tremendous demand for all classes of military badges.

HOMEBUSH STOCK SALES.

SHEEP.

MARKET AGAIN LOWER.

There was a total penning at Homebush yesterday of 11,151 sheep from 49 owners, but the quality of the sheep was not equal to the supply forwarded last sale day. The consignment included a fairly large sprinkling of shorn sheep in both the merino and crossbred sections. The total penning was about 2000 less than was drawn for. The attendance of mountain and coastal butchers was quite up to the average, but the whole of the supply for the metropolis was purchased as usual (since the strike) by two buyers. This, of course, restricted competition, and the sales were often confined to one bid. In fact, agents were occasionally unable to obtain an opening bid, and it was only when the mountain or coastal butchers intervened that anything like competition took place. Opening sales showed the market to be generally lower—as much as 1/ to 1/6 and more. As sales progressed, the market did not improve, except for odd lots of prime shorn sheep, which realised to about last day's general rates, but for all other sorts the closing sales showed a lowering of the market of about 2/. There was one lot of 124 cross wethers from W. Elder, of Narromine, which made to 48/3, and averaged 45/7.

Amongst the principal sales were the following:—From T. Bosley, x w to 35/7; from H. Robinson, of Bundure, shorn x e to 34/11; from Hain, Rowley, and Co., of Walgett, w to 38/; from Reed Bros., Ltd., of Ballata, x w to 32/4; from J. H. Keys, of Merah West, shorn e to 33/3; from J. S. McCulloch, of Carrathool, x w to 42/11; from J. H. Thomas, of Nyngan, shorn cows, hoggets, to 33/, and shorn x e to 32/; from McGill and Co., of Narrabri, w to 37/6; from J. W. Evans, of Walgett, w to 35/6; from Oakey Creek and Coomoo Coomoo Pastoral Coy., of Quirindi, w to 37/9; from H. E. Randell, of Tarcoon, w to 38/; from A. Byrne, of Gulargambone, w to 37/; from J. L. Hamblin, of Trangie, w to 37/6; and x w to 36/5; from W. Elder, of Narromine, 124 x w to 48/3, averaging 45/7; from Jas. Gordon, of Trangie, shorn x w to 34/6; from Western agents, at Coonamble, 28 x w at 45/5.

LAMBS.

There was a fair supply of lambs, including several consignments of suckers, for which there was a good demand. One line of 178 suckers from J. Keys, of Narrabri West, sold to 28/2, and averaged 26/7. A small lot of shorn cross lambs from A. C. Falkenhagen, of Nevertire, made to 31/7.

CATTLE.

A FIRM MARKET.

There was a yarding of 1054 cattle. This was 1000 less than was drawn for. The cattle came from 39 owners, scattered throughout the State. The northern centres of New South Wales and Queensland were well represented. The supply was composed of excellent quality cattle in all grades. Competition was keen from a good attendance of buyers. Every section of the trade was represented, including mountain and coastal butchers. The pool was again represented by two buyers, who operated for the whole of the metropolis. The prices at early sales were on a par with last day's rates. In places they were a shade easier, but the market finished firm for all sorts, and, generally speaking, much on a par with Thursday's general high quotations. One line of 67 bullocks from Northern agents at Walgett sold to £36/10/, and averaged £25/10/10. Another line of 25 bullocks from Allan Waugh, of Brewarrina, made to £34/3/, and averaged £26. The highest price obtained for bullocks was a yard of seven from the executors of the late J. Baillie, of Willbriggie. These sold to £37/2/, and averaged £34/3/; and 25 bullocks from J. J. Leahy, at Bourke, sold to £35/16/, and averaged £27/3/4.

Among the principal sales were the following:—From E. C. Broun, of Wallangarra, 32 bullocks to £32, avg. £24; and 8 cows to £22, avg. £19/2/; from Watt and Co., of Moree, 40 steers to £20, avg. £18/16/; from J. M. L. Macdonald, of Quirindi, 20 bullocks to £25/1/, avg. £22/6/; from Howlong Station, at Carrathool, 9 bullocks to £24/15/, avg. £22/11/; from T. J. Bowra, of Willow Tree, 20 steers to £20, avg. £19/12/, and 55 cows to £17/10/, avg. £15/7/7; from J. Leitch, of Wagga, 53 bullocks to £24/17/6, avg. £21/10/6; from exors. of Charlton Station, at Tarcoon, 27 bullocks to £23, avg. £21/19/3; from exors. of late T. Baillie, of Willbriggie, 7 bullocks to £37/2/, avg. £34/3/; from Allan Waugh, of Brewarrina, 25 bullocks and steers to £34/3/, avg. £26; from northern agents, at Walgett, 67 bullocks to £36/10/, avg. £25/10/10; from J. Ryan, of Bugilbone, cows and heifers to £20; from A. A. Company, of Willow Tree, 36 bullocks to £29/3/, avg. £27/14/; from Walhallow Estate, Breeza, 19 bullocks to £24/13/, avg. £23/9/5; from D. H. Allan, of Quirindi, 12 bullocks to £24/11/, avg. £22/17/8; from exors. of H. A. Duncombe, of Willow Tree, 40 bullocks to £24, avg. £23/7/; from W. and T. C. MINING.

STRONG RISE IN BARRIERS.

The mining market sprang to life briskly on the Stock Exchange yesterday, and a good day's business was listed. Attention was paid to almost every group and, save in isolated cases, a stronger market obtained. Mount Cuthbert hardened /1½ to 12/7½, and Lyell Blocks maintained the recent price of 2/ among the copper concerns, but Mount Morgan eased /6 to 31/.

As is often the case in the local market, Barriers set the general tone of the market, and a glance at the Broken Hill propositions gave the impression of a decided "lift" in the market. "Hills" and British appeared foremost in the rise, the former touching 50/, and closing 1/9 higher at 49/6. British jumped boldly to 35/6, finishing at 35/3. Junction North participated in the improved prices to the extent of a recovery to 14/7. Souths commanded solid prices, the contributing issue figuring at £9. The firmness of other silver-lead stocks helped New Burragorang, which rallied a trifle to 6/6.

The Westonian gold enterprises improved somewhat, but "Deeps" was the only venture which was handled at all extensively. The mine manager of the Deep Levels mine wired:—"North end advanced 4ft, value 6dwt, no footwall. North rise advanced 3ft to a total of 38ft, value 50dwt. Leading stope advanced 8ft to a total of 80ft from crosscut. South rise advanced 10ft to a total of 43ft, no stone, value low." The company's shares moved briskly at up to 25/4½, and reacted to 25/3 ere the final adjournment. Rimu sold /6 lower at 3/6.

Tin interests were decidedly in favour, and Malayan concerns were bought at advanced rates. Kampong advanced 1/6 to 45/6; and Larut put on 1/6 to 50/. Deebook rose /3 to 13/3; and Tongkah Compound closed 1/1 higher at 13/1. Tongkah Harbour eased /3 to 38/.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The Antarctic disturbance which was off our south coast on Sunday has moved across the Tasman Sea to New Zealand, and is at present centred to the south-east of the Bluff. An immense anticyclonic storm practically covered the whole continent at 9 a.m. on Monday, with its centre over the Bight. This high pressure has travelled south-eastwards to the extent of about 1200 miles during the 48 hours ended at 9 a.m. Monday, and maintains the same barometric value. A rather sharp dip in its northern isobars denotes monsoonal activity on the north-west coast of Western Australia. With these pressure conditions unsettled weather, with rain, may be expected along the coast and tablelands, with equally southerly winds. Fine weather should rule inland, with cool temperatures generally.

Ocean Forecast.—Seas generally smooth to moderate; freshening southerlies on the North Queensland coast.

DEATH OF SERGEANT J. A. GILBERT.

A letter has been received by Mr. J. T. Walker from Major Robert Gordon, of the Rhodesian Troops, Dar es Salaam, German East Africa, from which the following is an extract:—"Sergeant Gilbert, aged 25, of the Australian Light Horse, landed at Dar es Salaam from a boat load of Australian sick and wounded from Egypt. He was too ill to proceed south, so was landed for an operation on the liver, but was too ill to cure, and faded away. He was a plucky lad, and kept asking me to write to his mother (Mrs. J. Gilbert, Adaminaby, N.S.W.) to say he expected soon to recover sufficiently to start on his away to Australia. He was conscious to the last. Arnold Wienholt and I did what we could for him, and we both paid our last respects to a countryman by attending his funeral."
